Carter carried Ohio

Associated Press
President-elect Carter carried Ohio by 11,116 votes in a recount completed Monday, and another recount has been started in Oregon, a state President Ford carried by 1-559 votes.

The Ohio vote showed Carter with 2,011,621 votes and Ford with 2,000,505 in a recount including all of Ohio's 12,981 precincts.

A recount of Oregon's presidential election ballots was ordered by Secretary of State Clay Myers.

In Oregon, the original count gave Ford 491,909 votes and President-elect Carter 490,350 votes.

Algeria buying grits

Washington (UPI) — An Algerian government agency is in the market for 3,100 metric tons of grits. Agriculture Department officials disclosed Monday.

The announcement, included in a routine listing of trade notes, indicated the Algerians had no interest in serving the grits southern style.

Officials said the Algerian purchasing agency wanted the grits, made from corn, for use in 1977 beer production, along with 9,100 tons of malt and 80 tons of hops.

Also, the announcement noted, any businessman hoping to get an Algerian order should remember that all correspondence must be in French. As, for example: "Voulez-vous grits?"

Israel calls for talks

United Nations, N.Y. (AP) — Israel, in its first resolution submitted to the U.N. General Assembly in 27 years of membership, responded to Arab peace moves by calling Monday for the early reconvening of the Geneva Middle East conference.

The three-paragraph document would have the assembly urge Egypt, Israel, Jordan and Syria to meet in Geneva "without delay" under the co-chairmanship of the United States and the Soviet Union.

Lance modifies words

New York (AP) — Thomas "Bert" Lance, President-elect Carter's choice to head the federal budget office, modified his position Monday on the odds of a new income tax cut, calling it only "a leading option" instead of "almost a certainty."

Lance also said he believed the nation was now in a recession.

He had made the earlier comment about a tax cut over the weekend, but Carter said Monday morning that "I wouldn't say it (a tax cut) was virtually certain, although it is one of the possibilities."

Military pension plan 'lavish'

(c) Washington Star

Washington — The present military retirement pension system is nothing but a license to raid the treasury, Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., charged Monday.

"The numbers are complicated but the message is simple. The military pension scheme is not simply generous, it is lavish," Aspin declared as he released a 40-page study.

He charged that the pensions are a secret national debt that the public is not aware it has to pay.

Aspin has introduced legislation that would reform the military pension system by delaying the pensions for future retirees to a more normal retirement age. His bill would not affect those already retired.

"Conservatives who rail against the horrors of the $600 billion national debt should realize that federal pension promises add substantially more than $300 billion on top of that debt," Aspin said.

"Liberal critics of the Pentagon who declaim against the cost of the B1 bomber should realize that military pensions involve 5 1/2 times more money in the fiscal year 1977 budget."

Aspin said his research showed that an officer retiring this year after 20 years in uniform can expect to receive checks that would total 144% of what he made during the 20 years of service. For an enlisted man, he said, the pension would total 132%.

But Aspin said the average private sector worker could only expect to receive pension checks totaling 20 to 30% of his earnings over 20 years.

He said the military careerist deserves a good pension but pointed out that the military retiree is fully protected against inflation, while only some private plans give even partial protection.

The heavy cost of military pensions, which Aspin said rose to $8.4 billion this year and will reach $34 billion by the year 2000, is attributed largely to the early age at which pensions are paid.

The average regular officer retiring this year, Aspin said, is a lieutenant colonel only 46 years old. He will immediately begin receiving a pension of $15,400 a year and likely will go into a second career from which he will eventually receive another pension.

The average enlisted retiree is a 41-year-old platoon sergeant who will receive $6,400 a year.

These pension figures do not apply to retired military reservists who do not start collecting a pension until they reach the age of 60. The Pentagon has a plan before Congress to reduce benefits substantially for anyone retiring before completion of 30 years' service and estimates this plan would save $12 billion while encouraging more 30-year careers.

Another plan, put forward by the Defense Manpower Commission, suggests that pensions should be paid only after 30 years of noncombat service or 20 years in combat jobs.

Aspin's proposal would completely rewrite the retirement plan. It would grant vesting after only five years of service but would base annuities on age as well as years of service. For example, a man with 30 years' service would begin collecting a pension at age 55 while someone with five years' service would have to wait until age 62.

Men sought in heist of poker game

Indianola, Iowa (UPI) — State agents and local authorities were continuing a search for suspects in the robbery of a weekend high-stakes poker game during which a Minnesota man was believed fatally wounded.

Warren County Atty. John Criswell said warrants probably would be issued in connection with the robbery. There were rumors that two warrants had been issued for suspects in the Minneapolis area, but Criswell said he would not confirm or deny the report and would "wait until arrests are made."

However, Criswell said "I believe there is a link" between the death of David E. Anacker, 29, of St. Paul, Minn., and the poker game heist late Sunday in rural Indianola.

Anacker was found by a motorist with two gunshot wounds in the chest around 11 p.m. Sunday at a rest area along northbound Interstate 35 near Ankeny. He was pronounced dead on arrival at an Ames hospital shortly after midnight.

Three gunmen broke up the poker game around 10 p.m. Sunday at the home of Jack Taylor, located about four miles north of Indianola along U.S. 69 in Warren County, authorities said. Shots were fired and one robber, believed to have been Anacker, was wounded before the bandits fled with a large amount of cash and valuables.

Taylor also was injured during the robbery and was listed in serious condition with a skull fracture in the intensive care unit at a Des Moines hospital.

Authorities were uncertain how the bandits gained entrance to the Taylor residence. The farmhouse was equipped with a guard, a padlocked gate with barbed wire, two German shepherd dogs, spotlights and a loudspeaker system.

No gambling charges had been filed, although authorities indicated that gambling at the Taylor farmhouse had been under investigation for some time.

Reaganites getting it together

By Don Walton
Star Staff Writer

Supporters of Ronald Reagan are piecing together a national political action committee to promote conservative principles and recruit candidates for 1978 and 1980.

Reagan leaders from 10 Western states met in Phoenix over the weekend to set the effort into motion.

On hand as guests were Milan Bish and Glenn Wilson, both of Grand Island. Bish headed Reagan's successful Republican presidential primary campaign in Nebraska last May.

In the next few weeks, Bish will be in contact with Reagan leaders in North Dakota, South Dakota, Iowa, Missouri and Oklahoma to organize Plains participants in the national coalition.

"We have agreed to work with the structure of the Republican Party, not as a splinter group," Bish said in a telephone interview Monday.

"But we do recognize some weaknesses in the national party organization, including the dominance of the Washington structure."

The political action committee, as yet unnamed, will concentrate on principles, not personalities, Bish said.

Participants want Reagan to act as their "spokesman," Bish said, and most view him as "a good strong potential candidate" for president in 1980.

"But we are really thinking not so much who, as what."

The "what" are conservative political principles which have not always been adhered to by candidates who attempt to woo conservative voters, Bish said.

"We're going to examine the records of incumbents in the Congress and see how they vote compared to what they say."

And the group hopes to recruit potential conservative candidates for 1978 and "support them with manpower and money," he noted.

Reagan Supporters will be active in that regard in Nebraska, he promised.

"No one can assume that they can rest on their laurels," he said. "We will seek candidates to provide the type of representation that Nebraskans want."

Key races in Nebraska in 1978 include a U.S. Senate seat, the governorship and three seats in the House of Representatives.

States participating in the Phoenix meeting included California, Arizona, New Mexico, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah, Colorado, Nevada and Montana.

Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada, chairman of Reagan's 1976 campaign for the Republican presidential nomination, participated in the affair.

"We reviewed what happened in the primaries which led to the national convention in Kansas City," Bish said.

"And we found that all the states which Reagan carried (against President Ford) with the exception of five southern states went to Ford in November."

"It showed that the Reagan grassroots people did support Ford in November. On the other hand, I think that if Reagan had won the nomination, we would have had a lot of difficulty in many states getting the same kind of cooperation from the Ford people."

National surveys indicate that most Americans believe in conservative or moderate-conservative principles, Bish said.

"Partly because of Watergate and other problems in the GOP, the party has not been getting across its story."

"We're going to help try to provide the direction."

Fourth fire hits James property

Fire of undetermined origin did $65,000 damage to the home of Lincoln dentist Ben James III near Pleasant Dale Saturday night.

Southwest Rural Fire District Chief Ron Sherwood said nine Southwest fire units and four from Pleasant Dale responded to the alarm which was called in at 7:52 p.m. The fire was under control in 45 minutes, although it flared up five times during the night, Sherwood added.

Sherwood said this was the fourth fire in a year and a half on the James property. The house received extensive damage in the first blaze, Sherwood added, then a large hay barn, and a small hay barn burned in separate incidents.

Deputy State Fire Marshal Don Rixstine of Lincoln is investigating the Saturday fire. The family was not at home at the time and there were no injuries, Sherwood said.

Court says busing has to be tailored

Washington (AP) — The Supreme Court, in a major statement of its views on forced busing, Monday set aside a lower court order designed to desegregate Austin, Tex., public schools by busing up to 25,000 students.

The court told the Fifth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to come up with a more limited plan to integrate blacks, Mexican-Americans and other whites in schools.

"The remedy ordered appears to exceed that necessary to eliminate the effect of any official acts or omissions," Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. said in an opinion that spoke also for Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justice William H. Rehnquist.

Four justices gave no indication of how they voted in the matter, but at least two of them had to join in the opinion to form a court majority.

Justices William J. Brennan Jr. and Thurgood Marshall, the only members remaining on the court who once helped form a liberal majority under former Chief Justice Earl Warren, said the lower court's remedy was justified.

"Large-scale busing is permissible only where the evidence supports a finding that the extent of integration sought to be achieved by busing would have existed had the school authorities fulfilled their constitutional obligations in the past," Powell said.

"A remedy simply is not equitable if it is disproportionate to the wrong," he said for one-third of the court.

Powell said school officials cannot be held responsible for racial imbalance that is caused by residential patterns.

The court's ruling could have direct bearing on at least three similar cases, in Dayton, Ohio; Wilmington, Del., and Indianapolis.

The Justice Department filed a friends-of-the-court brief in the Austin case saying it believed the circuit court's decision should be upheld "in light of the evidence of extensive intentional discrimination against Mexican-Americans."

City-County plan given final look

By Vince Boucher
Star Staff Writer

Amid the election of officers, about 85 members of the Goals and Policies Committee Monday night gave a final look at the draft version of the Lincoln-Lancaster County Comprehensive Plan.

After viewing yet another batch of updated color slides, the group gave general approval to the plan as it relates to their stated goals, with a few small comments and one large objection.

Members voted to include in their comments a motion from the floor asking the planners and the city to reconsider the fate of the proposed Northeast Radial.

The radial's east boundary had been set at 27th St. earlier this year by the City-County Common, a combination of the City Council, County Board and the mayor.

That move countered the more aggressive street plan earlier recommended by the so-called "technical committee," a group of planners and local officials, to extend the radial east beyond 27th.

In sum, the Goals and Policies group seemed to be agreeing to a more aggressive plan, which has not been the basis for the final draft of the comprehensive plan submitted by Bartman-Aschman Associates of Chicago.

Specifically the resolution Monday night asked that radial construction plans be reconsidered and that a corridor of land be left open for an extension.

The citizen input group also voted on two issues at the request of County Board Chairman Bruce Hamilton.

On the question of easing the traffic burden of 84th St., the committee voted to favor a corridor study for a two-lane, limited access bypass to the east of 84th.

They also put themselves on record as endorsing keeping Old Cheney Road open as a local street between the proposed West Bypass and 14th St.

In the election, Dan Schlitt was chosen president by the group over out-going vice chairman Elaine Hammer.

Members elected to the monitoring board of the committee were Joe Hampton, Joyce Johnson, Al Plessman, Don Waldo, Buck Balok and Wilbur Knuth.

Police reviewers changed to advisers

By Gordon Winters
Star Staff Writer

The volunteer citizens body formerly known as the Police Review Board will now be known as the Citizen's Police Advisory Board, the City Council decided Monday.

Substantial changes were also made in the way the board operates as the council approved suggestions made by member Sue Bailey.

One of the major changes in the board's procedure is the elimination of a public hearing during which testimony is solicited.

In its place is a public meeting at which the board reviews written reports in which the identities of the complainant and the officers involved are kept secret.

Prior to that time two board members will have held private meetings with the Police Department and the complainant in an attempt to resolve the matter.

If those conciliation attempts failed, the public meeting would be the next step. At that meeting the full board would review written reports from the board members and written reports from the Police Department.

No testimony would be solicited, but that would not preclude the board from listening to comments, council members decided.

The move to change the board's procedures came after its first public hearing stirred controversy. Both police and the complainant said they were unhappy with the way the hearing was conducted.

Council members Max Demsey and Bob Sikyta first proposed the board be abolished altogether. Bailey's compromise followed on its heels.

The move to abolish the board was opposed by the board members themselves, who said it was needed as a safety valve.

"One policeman investigating another policeman does seem a bit awkward when you stop to think about it," Police Review Board member Ted LaRose told the council at a Monday morning meeting.

The move to abolish the board entirely was blunted further at the morning meeting when Mrs. Boosalis promised to veto the ordinance.

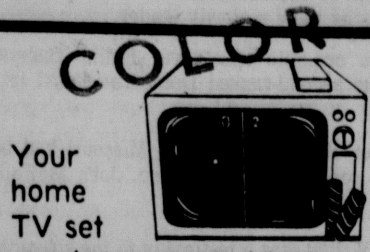

The compromise, in which the board will follow procedures similar to the Human Rights Commission, was approved 6-1, with only Bob Sikyta against it. Sikyta said he feels the police internal affairs office is handling complaints adequately.

As the council created the replacement board, council member Sue Bailey suggested that after more trial and error the council may want to work on the concept again.

In its place is a public meeting at which the board reviews written reports in which the identities of the complainant and the officers involved are kept secret.

Prior to that time two board members will have held private meetings with the Police Department and the complainant in an attempt to resolve the matter.

If those conciliation attempts failed, the public meeting would be the next step. At that meeting the full board would review written reports from the board members and written reports from the Police Department.

No testimony would be solicited, but that would not preclude the board from listening to comments, council members decided.

The move to change the board's procedures came after its first public hearing stirred controversy. Both police and the complainant said they were unhappy with the way the hearing was conducted.

Council members Max Denney and Bob Sikyta first proposed the board be abolished altogether. Bailey's compromise followed on its heels.

The move to abolish the board was opposed by the board members themselves, who said it was needed as a safety valve.

"One policeman investigating another policeman does seem a bit awkward when you stop to think about it," Police Review Board member Ted LaRose told the council at a Monday morning meeting.

The move to abolish the board entirely was blunted further at the morning meeting when Mrs. Boosalis promised to veto the ordinance.

The compromise, in which the board will follow procedures similar to the Human Rights Commission, was approved 6-1, with only Bob Sikyta against it. Sikyta said he feels the police internal affairs office is handling complaints adequately.

As the council created the replacement board, council member Sue Bailey suggested that after more trial and error the council may want to work on the concept again.

Air bags not required; Nader calls it a sellout

Washington (UPI) — Transportation Secretary William Coleman Monday refused to require air bags in cars, proposing instead a two-year test with the devices in about 5% of cars sold.

The project, beginning in September 1978 if the automobile industry agrees, would raise the price of a new car by $50 to $100 — depending on whether the air bag is full or half-size — for a total cost to consumers and industry of about $96 million, Coleman said.

Reaction from Detroit, which had opposed mandatory air bags, was guarded. General Motors, which offered the devices for three years but stopped, had no immediate comment.

Chrysler Corp. said protection from air bags is still "an unknown quantity" and it remains unconvinced seat belts are better.

Coleman said he was convinced "passive restraints are technologically feasible, would provide substantially increased protection for the public in traffic accidents and can be produced economically."

The devices, he added, can be "expected to prevent thousands of deaths and tens of thousands of injuries . . . on the nation's highways." But he said surveys indicated the public would reject the devices if they are forced on it.

Ralph Nader, an air bag advocate, said Coleman's "surrender to the auto industry will condemn thousands of Americans to avoidable death and injury on the highways. Although Mr. Coleman recognized that the air bag is a proven and great safety system and that it is inexpensive to install in new cars, he nevertheless refused to invoke the auto safety law and require mandatory installation. Hopefully his successor at the DOT will see things from the motorist's point of view."

Coleman proposed that at least two automobile manufacturers sign contracts with the government to offer for sale a total of a half million air bag-equipped 1979 and 1980 models, 250,000 in each of the two years. That compares to projected sales for 1976 of 10 million automobiles.

Half of the cars would be equipped with air bags covering the entire front seat, at an estimated cost of $100, while the other half would have air bags on the driver's side only, at a cost of $50.

Clarence Ditlow of the Center for Auto Safety said, "Coleman blundered because the auto industry never does anything voluntarily for the consumer except to raise prices." He predicted if the industry does not go along Coleman will make air bags mandatory before President Ford leaves office.

The American Automobile Association said the decision is "good in theory but we can't understand why he's asking the public to do it instead of requiring them on the government fleet of cars . . . Who's going to pay the difference between the cost he suggested and the real price?"

GM had been selling air bags for more than $300, compared to the prices Coleman quoted.

Allstate Insurance Co., which had offered premium discounts for cars with air bags, said "while we are disappointed in the decision . . . we are gratified that his analysis after months of study strongly supports the position of the automobile insurance industry relative to the workability, feasibility and cost" of air bags.

The DA meant it

Jess Sweeten, a 72-year-old ex-sheriff, must have been what District Atty. Bill Green had in mind when he was recently elected on a promise to get tough on crime in Athens, Tex. The 6-foot-4, 225-pound Sweeten shot nine men and killed three during a law enforcement career that stretched from 1932 to 1955. Next month the great-grandfather will become a criminal investigator for Green.

Kidnap charges dropped

Urbana, Ill. (UPI) — Kidnaping charges were dropped Monday against a babysitter who took her two charges to Iowa because she believed they were going to put out for adoption.

Authorities allowed Tina Buck, 30, also known as Verna McConaha, to plead guilty to the theft of a $100 insurance check taken at the same time as the children.

Champaign County Circuit Court Judge Roger Little ordered Miss Buck to pay back the $100 and sentenced her to one year conditional discharge, meaning she is on probation but does not have to report to a probation officer.

Miss Buck maintained that she took the boy and girl, ages 12 and 13, because she thought they were going to be given away.

The children disappeared Oct. 20 from their Urbana home and she was arrested a few days later in Davenport. The children were not harmed.

Wright No. 2 to Speaker 'Tip'

Washington (AP) — House Democrats Monday chose Thomas "Tip" O'Neill of Massachusetts as their speaker and Jim Wright of Texas as their majority leader.

Wright scored a one-vote upset over Phillip Burton of California to win the second-ranked Democratic post in the House, 148 to 147.

Earlier, reformer Richard Bolling of Missouri had been knocked out on the second ballot and Rep. John McFall of California lost after the first round.

This election of Wright was a testimony to the strength of newly selected House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, who had let it be known he would prefer anybody but Burton as his majority leader. O'Neill was chosen speaker unanimously earlier in the day.

After being nominated by acclamation to succeed retiring Speaker Carl Albert, O'Neill spoke briefly and emotionally of his goals as speaker.

"I intend to assure that the Congress remains a co-equal part of government," O'Neill said, with full equality with the White House and the executive branch.

He said the overriding challenge facing the country was to right the economy and to "put the unemployed back to work." O'Neill said his entire life has been devoted to public service and to helping people.

He did not mention the scandals which have arisen involving some House members, but, as he closed his speech, he told his colleagues:

"You have given me a trust. When I lay the gavel down, I want to walk out and have you say 'He kept the trust.'"

O'Neill's formal election by the full House in January is considered automatic.

The Democrats also chose Rep. Tom Foley of Washington to lead their caucus. In that race, Foley defeated Rep. Shirley Chisholm of New York, with 194 votes for Foley and 96 for Mrs. Chisholm.

Exclusion of one foe of capital punishment invalidates death penalty

Washington (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled on Monday that exclusion of even one juror opposed to capital punishment invalidates any death penalty imposed in a trial.

The justices also postponed indefinitely the execution of condemned Texas murderer Robert Excell White, who wanted no delay in the sentence, which had been scheduled for Friday.

In a 6-3 decision, the court tossed out the death sentence of condemned Georgia murderer Curfew Davis because one prospective juror at Davis' trial was excused after stating general scruples against capital punishment.

The high court postponed, pending appeal, White's death in a Texas electric chair. Only Justice William H. Rehnquist voted in favor of letting White become the first criminal to be executed in the United States since 1967.

The court last week postponed the firing squad execution of Utah murderer Gary Mark Gilmore, who had convinced state officials to let him die at sunrise Monday.

In the Davis case, attorneys contended that the excluded juror was never asked whether she could set aside her general scruples against the death penalty in that particular trial.

A 1968 Supreme Court decision in an Illinois capital punishment case said that exclusion of such jurors deprives defendants of their right to be judged by a cross-section of the community.

But the court never spelled out how many jurors would have to be so excluded before the jury could be labeled as biased in favor of capital punishment.

In an unsigned majority opinion, the court said Monday that it takes only one improperly excluded prospective juror to taint the sentence.

While attorneys active in the battle against the death penalty declined to estimate how many condemned prisoners might be affected directly by Monday's ruling, they said the decision could have wide-ranging consequences.

Most important, they said, is that it "revitalized" the court's 1968 decision that jurors opposed to the death penalty in general could not be excluded from sitting in on capital punishment cases.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, Rehnquist and Justice Harry A. Blackmun dissented from the majority opinion, saying that the majority had extended the principles of the 1968 decision too far.

Antitobacco gunman captured atop L.A. skyscraper

Los Angeles (AP) — A young gunman who said his father died of lung cancer and who wanted to warn the "whole world" against tobacco held a man hostage for 2½ hours atop a 62-story skyscraper Monday before he was taken into custody without incident.

Police said that the hostage, Martin Hickey, 60, chief engineer for the United California Bank Building, was released unharmed by Dolphin Lair, a 21-year-old school custodian.

Lair was armed with a handgun, police said.

"What did I do, what did I do?" Lair shouted as he was carried from the rooftop by police.

As he was placed in a waiting police car, Lair yelled to a nearby reporter: "What are they going to hold me for?"

saying that all he was carrying was a toy gun.

Police said, however, the weapon was a black revolver of unknown caliber and not a toy.

Following his release, the hostage — smiling broadly — thanked officers for a "good job" and then rushed to his office to call his wife.

Nessie proof not yet found

Cambridge, Mass. (UPI) — Research this year in Scotland's Loch Ness revealed some startling underwater discoveries, but no substantial proof of the legendary monster exists, according to a report published Monday.

Charles W. Wyckoff, chief of photography for the most ambitious and technologically sophisticated hunt for the monster, said earlier in a New York Times interview he was "disappointed, yes, but not discouraged. I'm still convinced in my own mind that there's something there."

The search, co-sponsored by the New York Times and the Academy of Applied Sciences, was conducted from June through the fall.

Reporting in technology review on their findings, sonar experts Martin Klein and Charles Finkelstein said the expedition "discovered underwater stone rings, constructed by an ancient civilization when the loch was lower."

They said they also detected "caves" in the loch walls and several large underwater objects they believe have at least a chance of being carcasses of large animals.

Traces of "large objects moving underwater" were also picked up by sonar detectors on four occasions, the report said. One object was described as a "carcass-like shape with a long necklike projection."

However, identification of the objects was impossible.

Ex-Brazilian leader dies

Former Brazilian President Joao Goulart, who was ousted in a 1964 military coup, died Monday in the northern Argentine province of Corrientes, where he had a ranch. He was 58.

Considered a leftist in Brazilian politics, Goulart was twice elected vice president under a system that chose the second man independently of the president. He succeeded to the presidency in 1961 when Janio Quadros unexpectedly quit.

But his demands for sweeping constitutional reforms and legalization of the outlawed Communist party brought his ouster after less than three years in office.

Rock star goes on anyway

Jamaican rock star Bob Marley gave a free concert two days after he was shot by unidentified snipers.

Marley went on stage under heavy police security at the National Heroes Park in uptown Kingston. Police on Monday had no clue to the cause of the Friday night shooting which hospitalized Marley's girlfriend, identified only as Rita, his manager Don Taylor and band assistant Louie Griffith.

Clashes erupt between rivals

Beirut, Lebanon (AP) — Fresh clashes between Lebanese Christians and Moslems erupted Monday in southern Lebanon while rival Palestinian guerrillas fought a bloody battle in the northern city of Tripoli.

A security spokesman said 20 Palestinians were killed and many were wounded in Tripoli in the biggest fight since Arab peacekeeping forces virtually ended Lebanon's civil war last month.

The battle pitted guerrillas of the Lebanon-based Al Fatah group against members of the pro-Syrian Saika group. The spokesman said it broke out when Saika gunmen tried to take back their headquarters, which had been occupied several months ago by Al Fatah guerrillas in the teeming Bo El Barajneh refugee camp.

In Beirut, leaders of Lebanon's right-wing Christians and Moslem leftists met for the first time in six months to discuss ways of restoring a stable peace.

The battle in Tripoli came after the funeral of an Al Fatah officer who was shot earlier in the day by Saika gunmen.

Party clings to power

Tokyo (AP) — The Liberal-Democratic party, battered at the polls in the wake of the Lockheed and other scandals, hung on to the government Monday by persuading eight independents to join its ranks.

But the party still faced a stormy leadership fight and the need to placate a maverick reform group that won strong support from the voters.

The biggest of those problems was Lockheed, which came on the heels of the alleged irregular financial wheeling and dealing and "money politics" that forced the resignation of millionaire former Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka in 1974.

Early this year, it was revealed in U.S. Congressional hearings that Lockheed had shelled out more than $10 million to boost sales in Japan, including a reported $2 million in bribes to government officials.

Tanaka and two former cabinet ministers and a dozen others, including prominent businessmen, have been indicted in the case. U.S. officials in Washington said they are confident the LDP's poor showing will not affect Japanese relations with the United States.

The LDP lost its parliamentary majority for the first time in 21 years in Sunday's elections. However, the conservative-dominated LDP's loss was little comfort to the opposition Communists, who lost 22 seats themselves — the only opposition party that failed to capitalize on the Liberal-Democrats' problems.

The LDP dropped a 51-seat majority in the lower house, winning only 249 out of 511 seats at stake.

The enlisting of those elected as independents by the LDP after elections is common because nonaligned members of parliament have little power. But this time, it was a necessity and it was only hours before the party announced it had signed up eight independents, giving it 257 seats compared to an opposition total of 254.

Each side blames the other

Geneva, Switzerland (UPI) — Blacks and whites at the Rhodesia peace talks Monday accused each other of responsibility for the ambush slaying of three Roman Catholic missionaries in Rhodesia.

Open hostility erupted between the two sides as Ivor Richard, the British conference chairman, failed in attempts to find common ground in discussions on the formation of an interim government for the period before black rule.

Richard, who flew to London Monday evening for consultations with Foreign Secretary Anthony Crosland, on the impasse at the six-week-old talks, met privately with nationalist delegation leaders and convened a plenary session. But the attack against the three German missionaries dominated the day. The white delegation said black terrorists were responsible, while the "patriotic front" of Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo said the killers were government agents disguised as guerrillas.

"The bishop was killed by agents of the regime disguised as guerrillas," said Nkomo, who added that he was married by Bishop Adolf Gregor Schmitt, one of the victims, in 1949.

Mark Partridge, deputy leader of the white delegation, told a news conference: "Anyone who believes Mugabe and Nkomo will believe anything. It is a warning to all of us to see what happens if terrorists are in charge of our country."

Rhodesian Premier Ian Smith was expected to return to the conference, which he left after the first week, by Wednesday or Thursday. Richard is expected back Tuesday.

Nessie proof not yet found

Cambridge, Mass. (UPI) — Research this year in Scotland's Loch Ness revealed some startling underwater discoveries, but no substantial proof of the legendary monster exists, according to a report published Monday.

Charles W. Wyckoff, chief of photography for the most ambitious and technologically sophisticated hunt for the monster, said earlier in a New York Times interview he was "disappointed, yes, but not discouraged. I'm still convinced in my own mind that there's something there."

The search, co-sponsored by the New York Times and the Academy of Applied Sciences, was conducted from June through the fall.

Reporting in technology review on their findings, sonar experts Martin Klein and Charles Finkelstein said the expedition "discovered underwater stone rings, constructed by an ancient civilization when the loch was lower."

They said they also detected "caves" in the loch walls and several large underwater objects they believe have at least a chance of being carcasses of large animals.

Traces of "large objects moving underwater" were also picked up by sonar detectors on four occasions, the report said. One object was described as a "carcass-like shape with a long necklike projection."

However, identification of the objects was impossible.

Party clings to power

Tokyo (AP) — The Liberal-Democratic party, battered at the polls in the wake of the Lockheed and other scandals, hung on to the government Monday by persuading eight independents to join its ranks.

But the party still faced a stormy leadership fight and the need to placate a maverick reform group that won strong support from the voters.

The biggest of those problems was Lockheed, which came on the heels of the alleged irregular financial wheeling and dealing and "money politics" that forced the resignation of millionaire former Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka in 1974.

Early this year, it was revealed in U.S. Congressional hearings that Lockheed had shelled out more than $10 million to boost sales in Japan, including a reported $2 million in bribes to government officials.

Tanaka and two former cabinet ministers and a dozen others, including prominent businessmen, have been indicted in the case.

U.S. officials in Washington said they are confident the LDP's poor showing will not affect Japanese relations with the United States.

The LDP lost its parliamentary majority for the first time in 21 years in Sunday's elections. However, the conservative-dominated LDP's loss was little comfort to the opposition Communists, who lost 22 seats themselves — the only opposition party that failed to capitalize on the Liberal-Democrats' problems.

The LDP dropped a 51-seat majority in the lower house, winning only 249 out of 511 seats at stake.

The enlisting of those elected as independents by the LDP after elections is common because nonaligned members of parliament have little power. But this time, it was a necessity and it was only hours before the party announced it had signed up eight independents, giving it 257 seats compared to an opposition total of 254.

Each side blames the other

Geneva, Switzerland (UPI) — Blacks and whites at the Rhodesia peace talks Monday accused each other of responsibility for the ambush slaying of three Roman Catholic missionaries in Rhodesia.

Open hostility erupted between the two sides as Ivor Richard, the British conference chairman, failed in attempts to find common ground in discussions on the formation of an interim government for the period before black rule.

Richard, who flew to London Monday evening for consultations with Foreign Secretary Anthony Crosland, on the impasse at the six-week-old talks, met privately with nationalist delegation leaders and convened a plenary session. But the attack against the three German missionaries dominated the day.

The white delegation said black terrorists were responsible, while the "patriotic front" of Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo said the killers were government agents disguised as guerrillas.

"The bishop was killed by agents of the regime disguised as guerrillas," said Nkomo, who added that he was married by Bishop Adolf Gregor Schmitt, one of the victims, in 1949.

Ex-Brazilian leader dies

Former Brazilian President Joao Goulart, who was ousted in a 1964 military coup, died Monday in the northern Argentine province of Corrientes, where he had a ranch. He was 58.

Considered a leftist in Brazilian politics, Goulart was twice elected vice president under a system that chose the second man independently of the president. He succeeded to the presidency in 1961 when Janio Quadros unexpectedly quit.

But his demands for sweeping constitutional reforms and legalization of the outlawed Communist party brought his ouster after less than three years in office.

Clashes erupt between rivals

Beirut, Lebanon (AP) — Fresh clashes between Lebanese Christians and Moslems erupted Monday in southern Lebanon while rival Palestinian guerrillas fought a bloody battle in the northern city of Tripoli.

A security spokesman said 20 Palestinians were killed and many were wounded in Tripoli in the biggest fight since Arab peacekeeping forces virtually ended Lebanon's civil war last month.

The battle pitted guerrillas of the Lebanon-based Al Fatah group against members of the pro-Syrian Saika group. The spokesman said it broke out when Saika gunmen tried to take back their headquarters, which had been occupied several months ago by Al Fatah guerrillas in the teeming Bo El Barajneh refugee camp.

In Beirut, leaders of Lebanon's right-wing Christians and Moslem leftists met for the first time in six months to discuss ways of restoring a stable peace.

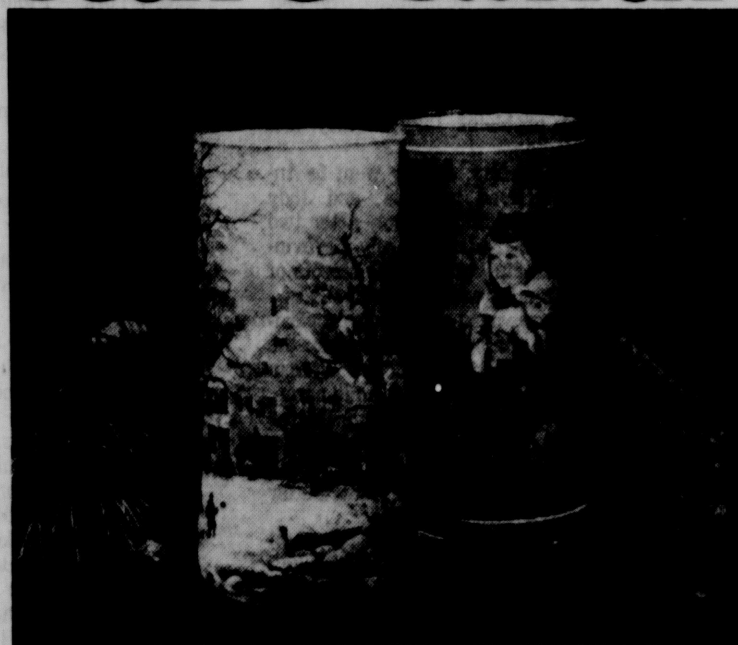

The battle in Tripoli came after the funeral of an Al Fatah officer who was shot earlier in the day by Saika gunmen.

Two roads to continuity

Local control not easy

Delegates to the annual convention of the Nebraska Association of County Officials heard a lot of conversation last week about continuing federal dollars in their pockets but less federal intervention in their affairs. The talk came from a Washington lobbyist who maintained the lower federal profile would be a trademark of the Carter administration and from Sen.-elect Ed Zorinsky.

Zorinsky voiced the theme as an expression of his own personal convictions as to the proper role of government. But Zorinsky and all those who are searching for federal aid without strings will likely find the achievement a difficult one.

It is not that less federal government is the wrong way to go. It is. The right way to go is toward more local control and less direction from Uncle Sam.

The difficulty will come in developing such an approach with adequate safeguards for the taxpayers. Some of the federal programs of the past most heavily surrounded by red tape have been ones where the greatest abuses have occurred.

One obvious conclusion from past programs is that not all local governments can be trusted to do a conscientious and efficient job of managing the federal dollars that may come their way. One program that may fall entirely to the federal government is county welfare.

One of the reasons for that, one of the pressures working for such a change, is the fact that the welfare program has not always been effectively managed at the local level. The federal government may pick up only the financing and leave the administration with the counties but more effective management will be expected.

In the past, federal housing programs, health programs and others have been riddled with abuse, despite considerable red tape aimed at preventing such a thing. Most of the reason for the red tape is to prevent abuse, waste and out and out dishonesty.

If local governments do get the opportunity to call more of the shots, the burden for effective and efficient administration will be on their backs. Local governing bodies will be called upon to demonstrate that, given the opportunity, they can produce the responsibility needed.

No strings federal aid will not be a gift horse, but rather, a new and demanding challenge at the local level of government.

By TOM WICKER

New York — When John Kennedy was narrowly elected president in 1960, the first Catholic and one of the youngest men ever to serve in the office, virtually his first official act was the reappointment of J. Edgar Hoover as director of the FBI and Allen Dulles as director of the CIA.

Kennedy's motives were clear. As in his later appointments of Republicans to the Treasury and Defense Departments, he wanted to reassure the nation that he was not a radical or a novice, but a leader who would put sound responsible men — as they were widely seen in 1960 — in sensitive positions. Even so, and despite later revelations about Hoover's and Dulles' leadership, their reappointments served the second purpose of keeping their important offices out of partisan politics.

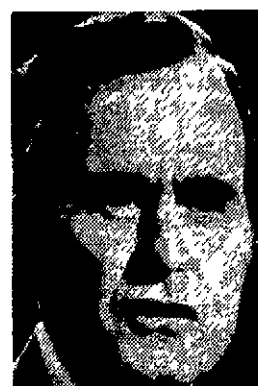

Sixteen years later, another narrowly elected "outsider," as president-elect, obviously feels the same need to reassure the nation. Just as important, the principle needs to be re-established that the directorships of the FBI and the CIA are not political plums to be handed out every time a different party takes power in Washington.

In the case of the CIA not only have there been three directors in the last four years, but the current director, George Bush, is a former chairman of the Republican National Committee. As ambassador to the United Nations and the American representative in Peking, however, Bush had useful experience for the CIA post and by all reports has performed capably in it. President-elect Carter spoke well of him after Bush had briefed him on the world situation.

Bush has announced that he plans to leave the CIA on Jan. 20, which gives Carter ample freedom of action. Whether he would consider reappointing Bush is not known, but there are several reasons why he might. It would re-establish the principle that the job does not necessarily change hands when the administration does. Another new director so soon would not necessarily be good for an agency shaken hard by recent disclosures of its abuses and ineptitudes. And a year or two from now, while Bush could leave with the principle of continuity intact, Carter would have had that much more time to consider the kind of man he should put into the CIA directorship, presumably to serve into the administration that would follow him.

Should such a long-term appointee be an intelligence professional, a knowledgeable outsider, a trusted associate of the president? Or, if Carter's

George Bush
... a useful holdover

Clarence Kelley

government reorganization plans should drastically change the shape and nature of the CIA, might some altogether different need be felt in a year or so? Extending Bush's tenure for a while would provide time for these and other questions to be pursued, and his own expertise might be helpful in answering them.

On the other hand, reassuring the nation requires Carter to replace Clarence Kelley as director of the FBI. With all due respect to Kelley, who brought some good qualities to the job, he has been tarnished by allegations of minor personal improprieties, and even more so by the disclosure that some illicit bureau activities continued without his knowledge and despite his public assurances that an end had been put to such outrages.

Nor has Kelley shown the kind of leadership either to cast off the remaining influences on the bureau of J. Edgar Hoover's half-century at its head or to mend its morale and reputation after the shattering disclosures of recent years. For Carter, however, the resulting need to replace Kelley poses a problem. Richard Nixon made a political appointment — that of L. Patrick Gray — to follow Hoover, and the unfortunate consequences should be warning enough to the president-elect.

He needs to make, that is, a clearly unpartisan choice to head the FBI, a nominee unchallengeable on professional grounds and acceptable both to liberals fearful of the bureau's past carelessness about the legal and constitutional rights of individuals and to those rightfully concerned that the FBI should be a tough and effective investigative force. This is not an easy prescription, but what is needed is the kind of director who would be wanted to continue in office by a Republican president, should one be elected in 1980 or 1984.

One man reported to be under consideration who might meet such requirements is Patrick Murphy, formerly the police commissioner of Washington, D.C., Detroit and New York City, now the head of the Police Foundation. Although Murphy served briefly in the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration at the end of the Johnson administration, he is fundamentally a police professional, without partisan identification, who has earned the respect of liberals and minority groups as well as that of other policemen.

Whether his appointee is Murphy or someone with equal qualifications, Carter ought also to couple his nomination with legislation to establish a set term of office for the FBI director. Five, seven or nine years — it would not matter too much — as long as the possibility of another Hooverian reign were foreclosed

Degrees of scandal

Rep. Charles Thone of Nebraska is indignant over the Korean lobby's attempt to buy friends and influence in U.S. government circles. The investigations now in progress indicate that "South Korean agents poured millions of dollars into bribes, gifts and contributions to perhaps as many as 90 present and past members of Congress and other federal officials," Thone points out.

The picture of congressmen and other U.S. officials greedily pocketing Korean handouts of money and other favors is indeed shameful.

And Thone is to be commended for suggesting new legislation to eliminate one of the practices which has allowed congressmen to shield such contributions. Thone said he will introduce a bill to outlaw so-called "office accounts" in which some congressmen deposit money to pay for some expenses between campaigns. Tainted money has ended up in office accounts, away from the public eye.

Thone, however, is a little too excessive in his assessment of the Korean effort to buy influence. He calls

it "America's greatest political scandal."

We are reminded of those who thought Watergate wasn't so bad because "nobody got hurt," or "nobody stole anything."

That is one way of looking at it. Others hold, however, that it doesn't take the presence of illicit money to constitute scandal.

Influence-buying and under-the-table acceptance of money and favors are venal and scandalous practices, but they don't hold a candle to pure and simple abuse of power when it comes to dangerous corruption.

The kind of scandal which involves the manipulation of positions of power given by the people to secure political advantage and unintended controls, the kind which sees legitimate power illegitimately used to trample the rights and protections of innocent citizens — of which Watergate serves as the perfect example — that kind of scandal is in the big leagues.

Putting Tongson Park and his gift-giving in the same class as Watergate is, like comparing an Omaha bookie with the Mafia.

Brussels — The North Atlantic Alliance likes to comfort itself during grim moments by recalling that during 27 years it has managed to deter any thoughts of Soviet aggression against Western Europe and also that its mere existence has probably helped to stave off holocausts which might otherwise have exploded from the Cuban or Middle East crises.

Yet, during relaxed moments and agreeable thoughts, we might do well to remember that the entire strategic balance of power has altered within the same 27 years. The Soviet Union, aided by more or less efficient allies, has maintained the most dynamic conventional army on earth, has lurched to approximate nuclear-missile equality with the United States, and has developed a naval strength that is at least on a parity basis, over-all.

One consequence is that Moscow no longer needs to feel inhibited anywhere in the world (as it did in 1962 off Cuba). The air-land-and-sea operation it successfully carried out last winter in Angola is an excellent case in point. By single-minded, determined long-range planning the U.S.S.R. has achieved a military revolution in less than three decades and has indicated it possesses the will to use this might if need be.

What is most disturbing about

There is no way without will

C. L. Sulzberger

NATO's position, as its ministers and generals prepare their annual year-end conferences here, is not the regular shortfall in troops, equipment and funds to which allied commanders have been forced sadly to adjust themselves. A more profound weakness is the sag in allied resolution, in the determination to defend our form of civilization.

Americans have been accustomed to blaming such lassitude on their European partners. But a study that has just been published in the Political Science quarterly by Prof. Bruce Russett and Miroslav Nincic of Yale comes up with a startling and even gloomier conclusion, namely:

"Public opinion in the United States is now much less favorably disposed toward the use of American military force abroad than at any time since the beginning of the cold war. In part this disposition stems from the American failure in Vietnam, but it is also a result of partial East-West detente and other changes in the world at large, and in America as well."

Thirty-five years ago (July 1941) when the U.S. was still neutral, surveys used by the authors show that 86 per cent of the American people were prepared to use our troops to defend Canada, 51 per cent to defend England and 60 per cent to defend the Philippines. The latest figures (computed in April, 1975) show this willingness has dropped to 57 per cent for Canada, 37 per cent for England and 29 per cent for the Philippines.

In October 1940 when the Atlantic treaty was born, 50 per cent of Americans favored "military action in case of Soviet attack on American allies in Europe." In December 1974 (the last sampling) the figure had dropped to 39 per cent. Moreover, the authors assert:

"Surveys since December 1968 have consistently found that 40-50 per cent of the populace want to reduce military spending, as compared with 5-20 per cent in 1937-39." As early as 1969 another study showed that only one of our NATO allies, Canada, enjoyed majority support (57 per cent) for help, if attacked, from U.S. troops or nuclear weapons.

This frightening analysis finds: "(1) the willingness of the American public to use United States armed forces for the defense of other nations is currently lower than during the earlier cold war years and is probably at approximately the same level as prevailed in the years immediately preceding American entry into World War II..." (when isolationism was strong).

"(2) Public willingness to employ nuclear weapons on behalf of allies is extremely low, much lower than during the early 1950s."

It is worth adding a somewhat unexpected footnote. The authors find that "elite or leadership samples" are far more willing to act on behalf of our allies than the general public and that, in the latter broad group, "willingness is greater with higher income and education."

From all this certain truths may be inferred. First, a truly massive and coordinated educational program explaining NATO and why we need it is required in all allied countries, but probably most in the United States. Secondly, if no such psychological and political effort is undertaken, the point may some day be reached when there will be no use in having any military budget to produce weapons because there won't be enough people left who might be willing to employ them in self-defense.

Transition, not translation

Boston — There is the notion being bandied about that those of us who were not "to the grins born" are going to have a tough time surviving the next four years in the hands of the Georgia Mafia.

The "Southern Takeover" is incessantly described in metaphors of the Civil War and Reconstruction. Virtually every other commentator is suggesting that the only way to understand the Carter people is to study "Gone with the Wind," and the only way to talk with them is to memorize "How to Speak Southern." Anyone north or west of the Mason-Dixon line who might want a job in the Good Ol' Boy Administration is advised to prepare his or her public penance for the acts of General Sherman, even if their own ancestors were getting it from the Cossacks at the time of the burning of Atlanta.

Our most homogenized newscasters apparently have just discovered that a cracker is not only something you eat and they feel compelled to impart this news flash to the rest of us. On Thanksgiving Day they all seemed stunned by the Carter family dinner. "HE EATS CORNBREAD" became the graffiti of the day.

We are being offered all kinds of primers on Southern pronunciation so that, God forbid, we will not be embarrassed if we meet Hamilton Jordan-Pronounced-Jerdin in the street. The newspapers that resisted "Ms." with a passion normally reserved for four-letter words, have adopted "Miz" as if it were the code for admittance to a private club.

Even New York magazine (the offspring of generations of Manhattan in-breeding) littered a piece on "Sister Rosalynn" with dialect like "near thunderstruck," and ended with an image of the future First Lady as "hot as a missionary shot out of a cannon on the Fourth of July."

It strikes me that those who are "discovering the South" as if it were a chic sunning-spot in the Mediterranean are in fact patronizing the South. Those who are trying to "break the stereotypes" are the ones with the stereotypes.

At the risk of sounding as if some of my best friends are southern, some of my best friends ARE southern. We managed over four years of college to overlook my "tomatoes" and their "yalls" to get down to the important stuff like, "Why didn't he call me last night?" We encountered somewhat fewer cross-cultural problems than if they had come from Samoa.

As for the Carters, Jimmy went to Annapolis, Lillian lived in India, and Jody Powell was a 4-H Club flunk-out. After two years on the road, Carter is hardly a provincial warlord planning to pave the streets of Our Nation's Capital with peanut shells.

I don't think we need all the overpreparation for Carter. A majority of us voted for the man. We can cope with his accent. We can adjust to the idea that Jody is a male name. We can surely accept Rosalynn Carter without the "steel magnolia" label and all the chatter about iron-fisted, soft-tongued southern ladies with fantasies of Rhett Butler fluttering in their hearts.

In fact, the idea of a Berlitz-style total immersion course in "hogjowl and hominy" talk reminds me painfully of the late 1960s when white liberals were convinced that the way to "relate" and "identify" with blacks was by "talking black." They went around "hey-manning" to the amusement of their intended brothers.

I'm sure that the southerners are also chuckling at the sudden proliferation of "real fines" and "near thunderstrucks" from those who had formerly tried to teach them Proper English.

We are suffering a verbal anxiety attack at the approach of a new crop of leaders. But having survived the Irish and the Texans, we ought to know by now that Carter won't raise the rebel flag over the Rose Garden, serve hogbacks to the French Ambassador or foster Dialectal Imperialism.

Drop the dictionaries. What we need here is a transition, not a translation.

New York — I told them my problem and they sent me up to the Bureau of Missing Presidents.

"What's the complaint?" asked a clerk.

"I haven't been able to find a president for nearly a month," I said.

"Don't worry about it," he said. "They almost always come back."

I made a small scene. A keen-eyed man with hunter's instincts and 30 pounds of newspapers under his arm came out of a sanctum. Instantly, I recognized Mr. Bean, tracer of lost presidents.

"What's all this about losing a president?" he asked.

"It's true, Mr. Bean. I've looked everywhere and the President has vanished."

"Which president is it?" he asked.

"The name is Ford, Gerald R. Ford."

He looked puzzled. "Ford," he murmured. "Where have I heard that name before?"

The clerk snapped his fingers in sudden remembrance. "Ford!" he cried. "Father of the WIN button! He was President back there in the fall."

"By golly, you're right, Clackers!" cried Mr. Bean. "It comes back to me now. Those debates. Standing around in the Rose Garden. What did you say his name was?"

"Ford," I said.

"I remember him. Big fellow. Receding hairline. Strong teeth," said Mr. Bean. "And you say he's flown the coop? Never fear. Mr. Bean is on the trail." And he flung himself back into his office, tore open his pack of newspapers and slammed the door.

Two days later the tracer of lost presidents called at my rooms. "I have made a complete search of the newspapers as well as the television, and you're right," he said. "The President has disappeared." "Have you no clues?"

The President is missing

Russell Baker

"There was a rumor yesterday that a woman in Wisconsin caught a peek of him boled up in one of the back pages of The Milwaukee Journal, but I couldn't track it down. You get a lot of rumors in cases like this. Some wild man called up and said he's seen the President on a local TV newscast in Tampa. When I phoned down there and asked about President Ford, all the newsmen said, 'President Who?'"

Bean wanted a fuller description of President Ford. "He's easy to recognize," I said. "Until his sudden disappearance, he couldn't resist turning up every day all over the newspapers and every night all over the television screen. Find the man who fits that description and you've got him."

"Only one man fits that description," said Bean, "but he calls himself Carter."

"A transparent disguise!" I cried. "This Carter has to be the President."

"Unlikely," said the great tracer. "The one point Carter repeatedly makes — indeed, the only reason he appears to have for enjoying such extensive reportage — is that he is not the President."

We both wrestled silently with the mystery's dread implications, but Bean left it for me to state them. "If the President has vanished, and the only man who looks like the President keeps insisting he is not the President," I pointed out, "It means that nobody is in charge."

"Hush," urged the tracer. "Nobody must know."

"The country must know —" "The country must not know. If word gets out that there is nobody in charge, think what could happen. Big steel, aluminum, duPont, natural gas, international oil and Consolidated Edison might all simultaneously seize the opportunity to take charge of the economy themselves and start raising prices."

"And betray the memory of the WIN button? Never, Mr.

Bean." "I mention only one of the worst hypothetical possibilities," said Bean. "Mum's the word on the disappearance of this president — what's his name?" "But the country needs a president." "One will turn up in good time. Meantime, remember — America has steel, aluminum, chemicals, gas, oil and the public utilities on its side, and also God, fortunately."

And Thone is to be commended for suggesting new legislation to eliminate one of the practices which has allowed congressmen to shield such contributions. Thone said he will introduce a bill to outlaw so-called "office accounts" in which some congressmen deposit money to pay for some expenses between campaigns. Tainted money has ended up in office accounts, away from the public eye.

Thone, however, is a little too excessive in his assessment of the Korean effort to buy influence. He calls

it "America's greatest political scandal."

We are reminded of those who thought Watergate wasn't so bad because "nobody got hurt," or "nobody stole anything."

That is one way of looking at it. Others hold, however, that it doesn't take the presence of illicit money to constitute scandal.

Influence-buying and under-the-table acceptance of money and favors are venal and scandalous practices, but they don't hold a candle to pure and simple abuse of power when it comes to dangerous corruption.

The kind of scandal which involves the manipulation of positions of power given by the people to secure political advantage and unintended controls, the kind which sees legitimate power illegitimately used to trample the rights and protections of innocent citizens — of which Watergate serves as the perfect example — that kind of scandal is in the big leagues.

Putting Tongsun Park and his gift-giving in the same class as Watergate is like comparing an Omaha bookie with the Mafia.

Transition, not translation

Boston — There is the notion being bandied about that those of us who were not "to the grits born" are going to have a tough time surviving the next four years in the hands of the Georgia Mafia.

The "Southern Takeover" is incessantly described in metaphors of the Civil War and Reconstruction. Virtually every other commentator is suggesting that the only way to understand the Carter people is to study "Gone with the Wind," and the only way to talk with them is to memorize "How to Speak Southern." Anyone north or west of the Mason-Dixon line who might want a job in the Good Ol' Boy Administration is advised to prepare his or her public penance for the acts of General Sherman, even if their own ancestors were getting it from the Cossacks at the time of the burning of Atlanta.

Our most homogenized newscasters apparently have just discovered that a cracker is not only something you eat and they feel compelled to impart this news flash to the rest of us. On Thanksgiving Day they all seemed stunned by the Carter family dinner. "HE EATS CORNBREAD" became the graffiti of the day.

We are being offered all kinds of primers on Southern pronunciation so that, God forbid, we will not be embarrassed if we meet Hamilton Jordan-Pronounced-Jerdin in the street. The newspapers that resisted "Ms." with a passion normally reserved for four-letter words, have adopted "Miz" as if it were the code for admittance to a private club.

Even New York magazine (the offspring of generations of Manhattan in-breeding) littered a piece on "Sister Rosalynn" with dialect like "near thunderstruck," and ended with an image of the future First Lady as "hot as a missionary shot out of a cannon on the Fourth of July."

It strikes me that those who are "discovering the South" as if it were a chic sunning-spot in the Mediterranean are in fact patronizing the South. Those who are trying to "break the stereotypes" are the ones with the stereotypes.

Two roads to continuity

By TOM WICKER

New York — When John Kennedy was narrowly elected president in 1960, the first Catholic and one of the youngest men ever to serve in the office, virtually his first official act was the reappointment of J. Edgar Hoover as director of the FBI and Allen Dulles as director of the CIA.

Kennedy's motives were clear. As in his later appointments of Republicans to the Treasury and Defense Departments, he wanted to reassure the nation that he was not a radical or a novice, but a leader who would put sound responsible men — as they were widely seen in 1960 — in sensitive positions. Even so, and despite later revelations about Hoover's and Dulles's leadership, their reappointments served the second purpose of keeping their important offices out of partisan politics.

Sixteen years later, another narrowly elected "outsider," as president-elect, obviously feels the same need to reassure the nation. Just as important, the principle needs to be re-established that the directorships of the FBI and the CIA are not political plums to be handed out every time a different party takes power in Washington.

In the case of the CIA not only have there been three directors in the last four years, but the current director, George Bush, is a former chairman of the Republican National Committee. As ambassador to the United Nations and the American representative in Peking, however, Bush had useful experience for the CIA post and by all reports has performed capably in it. President-elect Carter spoke well of him after Bush had briefed him on the world situation.

Bush has announced that he plans to leave the CIA on Jan. 20, which gives Carter ample freedom of action. Whether he would consider reappointing Bush is not known, but there are several reasons why he might. It would re-establish the principle that the job does not necessarily change hands when the administration does. Another new director so soon would not necessarily be good for an agency shaken hard by recent disclosures of its abuses and ineptitudes. And a year or two from now, while Bush could leave with the principle of continuity intact, Carter would have had that much more time to consider the kind of man he should put into the CIA directorship, presumably to serve into the administration that would follow his.

Should such a long-term appointee be an intelligence professional, a knowledgeable outsider, a trusted associate of the president? Or, if Carter's

George Bush
... a useful holdover

government reorganization plans should drastically change the shape and nature of the CIA, might some altogether different need be felt in a year or so? Extending Bush's tenure for a while would provide time for these and other questions to be pursued, and his own expertise might be helpful in answering them.

On the other hand, reassuring the nation requires Carter to replace Clarence Kelley as director of the FBI. With all due respect to Kelley, who brought some good qualities to the job, he has been tarnished by allegations of minor personal improprieties, and even more so by the disclosure that some illicit bureau activities continued without his knowledge and despite his public assurances that an end had been put to such outrages.

Nor has Kelley shown the kind of leadership either to cast off the remaining influences on the bureau of J. Edgar Hoover's half-century at its head or to mend its morale and reputation after the shattering disclosures of recent years. For Carter, however, the resulting need to replace Kelley poses a problem. Richard Nixon made a political appointment — that of L. Patrick Gray — to follow Hoover, and the unfortunate consequences should be warning enough to the president-elect.

He needs to make, that is, a clearly unpartisan choice to head the FBI, a nominee unchallengeable on professional grounds and acceptable both to liberals fearful of the bureau's past carelessness about the legal and constitutional rights of individuals and to those rightfully concerned that the FBI should be a tough and effective investigative force. This is not an easy prescription, but what is needed is the kind of director who would be wanted to continue in office by a Republican president, should one be elected in 1980 or 1984.

One man reported to be under consideration who might meet such requirements is Patrick Murphy, formerly the police commissioner of Washington, D.C., Detroit and New York City, now the head of the Police Foundation. Although Murphy served briefly in the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration at the end of the Johnson administration, he is fundamentally a police professional, without partisan identification, who has earned the respect of liberals and minority groups as well as that of other policemen.

Whether his appointee is Murphy or someone with equal qualifications, Carter ought also to couple his nomination with legislation to establish a set term of office for the FBI director. Five, seven or nine years — it would not matter too much — as long as the possibility of another Hooverian reign were foreclosed.

There is no way without will

C. L. Sulzberger

Brussels — The North Atlantic Alliance likes to comfort itself during grim moments by recalling that during 27 years it has managed to deter any thoughts of Soviet aggression against Western Europe and also that its mere existence has probably helped to stave off holocausts which might otherwise have exploded from the Cuban or Middle East crises.

Yet, during relaxed moments and agreeable thoughts, we might do well to remember that the entire strategic balance of power has altered within the same 27 years. The Soviet Union, aided by more or less efficient allies, has maintained the most dynamic conventional army on earth, has lurched to approximate nuclear-missile equality with the United States, and has developed a naval strength that is at least on a parity basis, over-all.

One consequence is that Moscow no longer needs to feel inhibited anywhere in the world (as it did in 1962 off Cuba). The air-land-and-sea operation it successfully carried out last winter in Angola is an excellent case in point. By single-minded, determined long-range planning the U.S.S.R. has achieved a military revolution in less than three decades and has indicated it possesses the will to use this might if need be.

What is most disturbing about

NATO's position, as its ministers and generals prepare their annual year-end conferences here, is not the regular shortfall in troops, equipment and funds to which allied commanders have been forced sadly to adjust themselves. A more profound weakness is the sag in allied resolution, in the determination to defend our form of civilization.

Americans have been accustomed to blaming such lassitude on their European partners. But a study that has just been published in the Political Science quarterly by Prof. Bruce Russett and Miroslav Nincic of Yale comes up with a startling and even gloomier conclusion, namely:

"Public opinion in the United States is now much less favorably disposed toward the use of American military force abroad than at any time since the beginning of the cold war. In part this indisposition stems from the American failure in Vietnam, but it is also a result of partial East-West detente and other changes in the world at large, and in America as well."

Thirty-five years ago (July 1941) when the U.S. was still neutral, surveys used by the authors show that 86 per cent of the American people were prepared to use our troops to defend Canada, 51 per cent to defend England and 60 per cent to defend the Philippines. The latest figures (computed in April, 1975) show this willingness has dropped to 57 per cent for Canada, 37 per cent for England and 29 per cent for the Philippines.

In October 1949 when the Atlantic treaty was born, 50 per cent of Americans favored "military action in case of Soviet attack on American allies in Europe." In December 1974 (the last sampling) the figure had dropped to 39 per cent. Moreover, the authors assert:

"Surveys since December 1968 have consistently found that 40-50 per cent of the populace want to reduce military spending, as compared with 5-20 per cent in 1937-39." As early as 1969 another study showed that only one of our NATO allies, Canada, enjoyed majority support (57 per cent) for help, if attacked, from U.S. troops or nuclear weapons.

This frightening analysis finds: "(1) the willingness of the American public to use United States armed forces for the defense of other nations is currently lower than during the earlier cold war years and is probably at approximately the same level as prevailed in the years immediately preceding American entry into World War II..." (when isolationism was strong).

"(2) Public willingness to employ nuclear weapons on behalf of allies is extremely low, much lower than during the early 1950s."

It is worth adding a somewhat unexpected footnote. The authors find that "elite or leadership samples" are far more willing to act on behalf of our allies than the general public and that, in the latter broad group, "willingness is greater with higher income and education."

From all this certain truths may be inferred. First, a truly massive and coordinated educational program explaining NATO and why we need it is required in all allied countries, but probably most in the United States.

Secondly, if no such psychological and political effort is undertaken, the point may some day be reached when there will be no use in having any military budget to produce weapons because there won't be enough people left who might be willing to employ them in self-defense.

The President is missing

Russell Baker

New York — I told them my problem and they sent me up to the Bureau of Missing Presidents.

"What's the complaint?" asked a clerk.

"I haven't been able to find a president for nearly a month," I said.

"Don't worry about it," he said. "They almost always come back."

I made a small scene. A keen-eyed man with hunter's instincts and 30 pounds of newspapers under his arm came out of a sanctum. Instantly, I recognized Mr. Bean, tracer of lost presidents.

"What's all this about losing a president?" he asked.

"It's true, Mr. Bean. I've looked everywhere and the President has vanished."

"Which president is it?" he asked.

"The name is Ford. Gerald R. Ford."

He looked puzzled. "Ford," he murmured. "Where have I heard that name before?"

The clerk snapped his fingers in sudden remembrance. "Ford!" he cried. "Father of the WIN button! He was President back there in the fall."

"By golly, you're right, Clackers!" cried Mr. Bean. "It comes back to me now. Those debates. Standing around in the Rose Garden. What did you say his name was?"

"Ford," I said.

"I remember him. Big fellow. Receding hairline. Strong teeth," said Mr. Bean. "And you say he's flown the coop? Never fear. Mr. Bean is on the trail." And he flung himself back into his office, tore open his pack of newspapers and slammed the door.

Two days later the tracer of lost presidents called at my rooms. "I have made a complete search of the newspapers as well as the television, and you're right," he said. "The President has disappeared." "Have you no clues?"

"There was a rumor yesterday that a woman in Wisconsin caught a peek of him holed up in one of the back pages of The Milwaukee Journal, but I couldn't track it down. You get a lot of rumors in cases like this. Some wild man called up and said he's seen the President on a local TV newscast in Tampa. I phoned down there and asked about President Ford, all the newsmen said, 'President Who?'"

Bean wanted a fuller description of President Ford. "He's easy to recognize," I said. "Until his sudden disappearance, he couldn't resist turning up every day all over the newspapers and every night all over the television screen. Find the man who fits that description and you've got him."

"Only one man fits that description," said Bean, "but he calls himself Carter."

"A transparent disguise!" I cried. "This Carter has to be the President."

"Unlikely," said the great tracer. "The one point Carter repeatedly makes — indeed, the only reason he appears to have for enjoying such extensive reportage — is that he is not the President."

We both wrestled silently with the mystery's dread implications, but Bean left it for me to state them. "If the President has vanished, and the only man who looks like the President keeps insisting he is not the President," I pointed out, "It means that nobody is in charge."

"Hush," urged the tracer. "Nobody must know." "The country must know —" "The country must not know. If word gets out that there is nobody in charge, think what could happen. Big steel, aluminum, duPont, natural gas, international oil and Consolidated Edison might all simultaneously seize the opportunity to take charge of the economy themselves and start raising prices."

"And betray the memory of the WIN button? Never, Mr.

Bean." "I mention only one of the worst hypothetical possibilities," said Bean. "Mum's the word on the disappearance of this president — what's his name?" "But the country needs a president."

"One will turn up in good time. Meantime, remember — America has steel, aluminum, chemicals, gas, oil and the public utilities on its side, and also God, fortunately."

Water, energy said top farm issues

Associated Press
Water and energy are the top priority issues confronting Nebraska agriculture, according to Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation President Wendell Gangwish of Wood River.
He addressed Farm Bureau members and delegates attending their annual state convention Monday afternoon.
Gangwish compared the current drought period to that sustained by the state in the mid-1950s and said without irrigation development, agricultural production in 1976 would have been at a disaster level.
Gangwish said despite Nebraska's exceptional underground water resources, he believes there cannot continue to be restricted irrigation development without some undesirable results in the future.
He cited water studies being conducted on by the Legislature and the University of Nebraska and urged Farm Bureau members and all Nebraskans to help representatives of government establish regulations and guidelines to provide for "wise and fair development" and conservation of the state's surface and underground water resources.
Gangwish said farmers will continue to rely on liquid fuels for their mobile production equipment for the foreseeable future. He predicted more coal will be converted to electrical energy. Gangwish said there will be major increases in electricity generated from nuclear plants.

Gangwish, former president of the Nebraska Rural Electric Association, said solar energy can be adapted in many ways, but added that quantity requirements will limit its application.
Gangwish said high levels of farm commodity exports should be maintained because they have been "good for farmers."
He said market prices for commodities "are a sore subject right now," but said price support guarantees at the cost of production "can only guarantee problems of over production and low prices."
He said "the free enterprise system with the laws of supply and demand permitted to function will prove more beneficial to farmers and ranchers than high support prices and acreage controls."
Gangwish urged farmers to study marketing and said they could develop a marketing program and include some forward contract and hedging in their production system.

Teen-agers killed in plane reportedly drank at party

Kimball (AP) — Three teen-agers who died in a pre-dawn airplane crash Sunday had apparently been drinking hours before they decided to take an airplane ride, authorities investigating the crash said.
The pilot, Wesley Brothers, 19, of Dix, and two 17-year-old Kimball passengers, Joy Evelyn and Russell Moore Jr., were killed when the single-engine craft nose-dived into a wheat field after takeoff, investigators said.
Trooper Steve Evans of the Nebraska State Patrol in Kimball said several people who last saw the trio reported the victims were drinking at a post-basketball game party Saturday night.
Kimball County Atty Jack Myers said blood-alcohol content specimens were to be taken from all three victims and a Scottsbluff pathologist was to perform an autopsy on Brothers.
Neither Myers or the Federal Aviation Administration had results of the tests and autopsy Monday and neither could say when the results would be released.
Authorities said numerous people who had last seen the victims were questioned Sunday and Monday.
Brothers obtained his private pilot license in May, the State Patrol said. It was not known how much flying experience he had.
The airplane was registered to Maxwell and Sons of Dix, according to the FAA. A state trooper said the firm is an aviation concern and that one of the Maxwell sons was a roommate of Brothers.
It was undetermined Monday whether Brothers had obtained permission to fly the airplane early Sunday, but one investigator said Brothers had been using the Maxwell boy's car and may have had access to the airplane keys.

Missouri water use eyed

Kansas City (AP) — Area officials plan to meet Tuesday with the director of the Kansas Water Resources Board to express their concern over plans to divert water from upstream Missouri River reservoirs.
Of primary concern is a proposed coal slurry pipeline which would use about 300,000 acre-feet of water a year when completed, according to Max Norman, transportation manager of the Greater Kansas City Chamber of Commerce.
A draft environmental impact statement prepared earlier this year by the Interior Department indicated the project would use about 186,000 acre-feet a year by the year 2000.
Representatives of chambers here and Kansas City, Kan., as well as the Mid-America Regional Council will meet with James A. Power Jr., director of the Kansas Water Board, to assess the problem.
The local officials are concerned with the possible use by industry of up to one million acre-feet of water a year by the year 2000 from the upstream Missouri River reservoirs.
Area officials are concerned both about the amount of the diversion and the precedent it might establish, said Norman.
"It is the principle we're concerned about, the right to divert water from the river," Norman said. "We need to determine what rights they (states upstream) on the Missouri have, what rights we have and what we can do to protect ourselves in the future."
Norman said area officials are particularly concerned over a proposal by Energy Transportation Systems Inc. to build a coal slurry pipeline from Wyoming to Arkansas, which would cut across Nebraska and Kansas

"Conserving energy at our house hasn't been any problem. It's mostly a matter of using good sense."

If conservation is practiced year 'round in your home, you'll save more than energy, you'll save money.
The starting point is a snug enclosure. If your attic and walls are adequately insulated and your doors and windows are weather-stripped, the rest is easy. If not, visit with a qualified insulation contractor. And weatherstrip.
Leave storm doors and windows up year 'round. If caulking is needed around door and window frames, do it. If you don't use a room, close the door and vents. When your fireplace isn't in use, keep the damper closed. In the winter, let the sun shine in. During summer, draw the drapes. Have your gas furnace and air conditioner checked once a year. And keep your thermostat set at 68° during winter, 78° during summer.
Be appliance wise. You'll save on your gas water heating if you fix leaky faucets, take short showers and wash full loads of clothes and dishes.
Keep the lint filter clean in your gas dryer. Dry full loads and dry heavy, bulky items separately. But don't overdry anything.
Preheat your gas oven for only 10 minutes. Keep the oven door closed, don't peek. And cook out often on your gas grill in the summertime.
Even though gas is usually the most economical form of energy, and even though its consumption in the home is perhaps its most conservative use, you benefit even more if you use gas wisely.

"For my money, conservation makes sense."

Missouri water use eyed

Kansas City (AP) — Area officials plan to meet Tuesday with the director of the Kansas Water Resources Board to express their concern over plans to divert water from upstream Missouri River reservoirs.

Of primary concern is a proposed coal slurry pipeline which would use about 300,000 acre-feet of water a year when completed, according to Max Norman, transportation manager of the Greater Kansas City Chamber of Commerce.

A draft environmental impact statement prepared earlier this year by the Interior Department indicated the project would use about 186,000 acre-feet a year by the year 2000.

Representatives of chambers here and Kansas City, Kan., as well as the Mid-America Regional Council will meet with James A. Power Jr., director of the Kansas Water Board, to assess the problem.

The local officials are concerned with the possible use by industry of up to one million acre-feet of water a year by the year 2000 from the upstream Missouri River reservoirs.

Area officials are concerned both about the amount of the diversion and the precedent it might establish, said Norman.

"It is the principle we're concerned about, the right to divert water from the river," Norman said. "We need to determine what rights they (states upstream) on the Missouri have, what rights we have and what we can do to protect ourselves in the future."

Norman said area officials are particularly concerned over a proposal by Energy Transportation Systems Inc. to build a coal slurry pipeline from Wyoming to Arkansas, which would cut across Nebraska and Kansas.

"Conserving energy at our house hasn't been any problem. It's mostly a matter of using good sense."

If conservation is practiced year 'round in your home, you'll save more than energy, you'll save money.

The starting point is a snug enclosure. If your attic and walls are adequately insulated and your doors and windows are weather-stripped, the rest is easy. If not, visit with a qualified insulation contractor. And weatherstrip.

Leave storm doors and windows up year 'round. If caulking is needed around door and window frames, do it. If you don't use a room, close the door and vents. When your fireplace isn't in use, keep the damper closed. In the winter, let the sun shine in. During summer, draw the drapes. Have your gas furnace and air conditioner checked once a year. And keep your thermostat set at 68° during winter, 78° during summer.

Be appliance wise. You'll save on your gas water heating if you fix leaky faucets, take short showers and wash full loads of clothes and dishes.

Keep the lint filter clean in your gas dryer. Dry full loads and dry heavy, bulky items separately. But don't overdry anything.

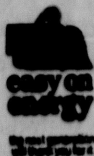

Preheat your gas oven for only 10 minutes. Keep the oven door closed, don't peek. And cook out often on your gas grill in the summertime.

Even though gas is usually the most economical form of energy, and even though its consumption in the home is perhaps its most conservative use, you benefit even more if you use gas wisely.

Suspect in shooting policeman waives hearing

Omaha (UPI) — The suspect in the near point-blank range shooting of an Omaha police sergeant wearing a bullet proof vest waived a preliminary hearing Monday and was bound over to Douglas County District Court.

Municipal Judge Theodore Carlson entered a not guilty plea for Steven L. Herdt, who said he would be 22 years old Tuesday, on a felony charge of assault with intent to kill, wound or maim.

Carlson appointed the Douglas County public defender's office to represent Herdt, who said he was without funds to hire private counsel. Herdt said he last worked building grain bins for a Grand Island firm in October.

Herdt was being held in lieu of a $50,000 bond which Carlson continued Monday. To be freed, Herdt would have to post $5,000 cash or a $20,000 surety bond. Deputy Public Defender Jim Campbell said Herdt told him he had never been convicted of a felony, but had one misdemeanor conviction.

Campbell said Herdt gave his home of record as Giltner, a small central Nebraska community where he surrendered to law officers without resistance last Thursday night at his parents' home.

Herdt said he had lived at a far North Omaha trailer court for about a week prior to the incident last Wednesday night when Sgt. Charles Parker, 41, was shot by the driver of a black Jeep.

After Monday's hearing, Campbell said Herdt had no particular reason for coming to Omaha and hasn't denied shooting Parker, who escaped injury because of the bullet proof vest he was wearing.

Parker has said he stopped the Jeep because its license number matched a description broadcast earlier on a fugitive warrant issued in Hastings where Herdt allegedly wrote a $6,000 insufficient funds check to pay for the 1977 Jeep.

Authorities have said the Jeep was extensively damaged when it smashed into a tree about 17 blocks from the shooting site and about three blocks southwest of the trailer park Wednesday night.

Police said a pistol holster was found strapped on the back seat of the Jeep, and a .38-caliber pistol was recovered at the time of Herdt's arrest in Giltner.

Herdt also faces an assault charge on a police officer in Grand Island, a felony charge in Hastings for the bad check, and a charge of reckless driving in Kearney.

In court Monday, Herdt was wearing bluejeans and a denim jacket with drag racing emblems sewn on it.

During the confusion involving Herdt last Wednesday night, an innocent bystander, David E. Sauer, 18, of Omaha, received a minor gunshot wound when police officer Richard A. Siebken fired his service revolver at a van Sauer was driving.

A police spokesman said Monday an internal investigation absolved Siebken of any wrongdoing.

State Digest

Heart attack blamed

Beatrice (AP) — A coroner's jury has ruled that the death of Fred Adams, 59, was not from "felonious means" and that his son-in-law should not be charged with a felony. The inquest was called after Adams, a resident of Adams, died Wednesday following an altercation with Jerry Larmeu, 38. Authorities said an autopsy concluded the cause of death was a heart attack. Larmeu has been charged with intoxication and disturbing the peace. The charges stemmed from an alleged quarrel and struggle between Adams and Larmeu that lasted from 15 to 30 minutes, according to testimony at the inquest.

Fire caused by popper

Omaha (AP) — District Fire Chief Gens O'Laughlin blamed a defective popcorn machine for a $100,000 fire at the Singles Lounge in West Omaha Sunday night. He said an electrical short probably caused a reported explosion in the machine. He estimated damage at $75,000 to the lounge contents and $25,000 to the building.

Water emphasized

Columbus (AP) — About 90 exhibitors and educational programs on irrigation and water management are scheduled for next month's annual Northeast-Central Nebraska Farm Exposition here, sponsors said. The exposition will be held Jan. 11-12 at the Platte County Agricultural Park.

Honey output may rise

Nebraska, which ranked eighth last year nationally in honey production, is expected to up its production 5% this year. According to the state Agriculture Department, Nebraska will produce about 6.7 million pounds of honey this year.

UNL debaters fifth

Ames, Iowa (AP) — The University of Nebraska-Lincoln debate

team placed fifth in a field of 90 at an Iowa State University debate contest. Leslie McGrew of Omaha and Mark Adams of Lincoln competed for Nebraska against teams from Michigan, Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Kansas and Missouri.

Near 27% get shots

Omaha (AP) — Omaha area persons turned out 13,500 strong Sunday to get the last free swine flu shots that will be offered in the Omaha area.

Mathews chosen

Kearney — At the quarterly meeting of members of the Central Nebraska Emergency Medical Services, Dr. M. D. Mathews of St. Paul was elected chairman. Other officers include Dr. Joel T. Johnson of Kearney, vice chairman; Byron Anderson of Holdrege, secretary; and George Fairfield, treasurer. Central Nebraska Emergency Medical Services Council serves a 21-county area.

Omaha landlord gets 5-year term

Omaha (UPI) — The owner of several Omaha apartment houses was sentenced to five years in prison Monday on a charge of unlawful possession for sale of heroin with an estimated street value of more than $250,000.

Douglas County District Judge Donald Hamilton sentenced Walter D. Odinas, 44, after rejecting arguments from Odinas' attorney, Arthur J. O'Leary, that Odinas be placed on probation.

Hamilton, however, granted O'Leary's request that Odinas' sentence be deferred for 30 days to give him time to place his affairs in order.

Odinas pleaded guilty Sept. 28, about five months after police said they arrested him at a vacant apartment building he owned. Police said Odinas was preparing about three ounces of highly pure brown Mexican heroin for street sale at the time.

O'Leary said he was undecided on whether to appeal Monday's sentence.

Odinas could be paroled in less than a year providing he receives time off for good behavior.

Carbon monoxide kills one

Omaha (UPI) — An autopsy performed Monday revealed that a North Omaha woman died of carbon monoxide poisoning from a small fire in her home. Soot was found in her throat.

Acting Douglas County Coroner James P. Keenan said Maude Bignal, 73, had been dead for more than 24 hours when her body was found by police and a neighbor Sunday.

Keenan said investigators theorized she was smoking in an overstuffed chair when it caught fire.

She managed to crawl into a hallway, where her body was found. Keenan said there was no reason to suspect foul play.

Varied programs planned

A multi-faceted program is planned for those attending the 1977 area dairy days at four cities in January, according to Dr. Foster Owen, University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension dairyman.

The identical programs will be held Jan. 3 in Beatrice at the 4-H Building, Jan. 4 at Arlington's City Auditorium, Jan. 6 in Plainview at the Legion Club and Jan. 7 in Broken Bow's 4-H Building, he said.

Owen said each site's program will start at 9:30 a.m. with registration and adjourn at 3:30 p.m.

The agendas will feature presentations on dairy marketing, breeding and management, herd feeding and numerous displays and exhibits, Owen said.

Current milk prices and the reasons behind them will be covered during the morning's first presentation by T. Allen Evans, UNL food science and technology professor.

A morning panel discussion featuring UNL Extension dairyman Phil Cole and Dr. Larry Larson, UNL assistant animal science professor, will detail breeding and management topics, including:

- Early post-partum breeding.
- The cow as a social being, examining dairy cattle behavior, especially in groups, and its impact on performance.
- New milk tests that experimentally have shown a potential in determining pregnancy.
- New identification programs initiated by the U.S. Department of Agriculture on grade animals.

A similar panel on feeding dairy herds will kick off the afternoon program, Owen said, and will include Don Kubik, district Extension dairy specialist from UNL's Northeast Station in Concord, and himself.

Girl Scouts establish memorial to bird lover

Wood River (AP) — Members of a Girl Scout troop spotted a newspaper story about an elderly bird lover three years ago.

A friendship developed and an unusual memorial has been constructed here to honor the late Clyde Varner of Omaha.

As the story goes, Varner, who was 90 at the time, walked a mile to a bakery each week to purchase a shopping cart full of stale bread so he could feed his "wild ones."

Four times each day Varner fed the flocks of birds that visited his yard.

The 10 girls of Troop 121 drew up their own nature project and provided their adopted grandfather with a steady stream of bird seed. Occasionally, they would send along homemade cookies for Varner.

Last spring Troop 121 disbanded and one of its last activities was to send a package of gifts to Varner for his 92nd birthday. He died two days later.

Aided by their fathers, the girls organized a project to construct a bird bath and feeder at a senior citizens' housing project.

Donated money helped establish the memorial with funds left over to continue its maintenance and provide feed for Varner's wild ones for years to come.

Marching band won't be going to bowl game

The Cornhusker Marching Band will not accompany the football team to the Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl in Houston Dec. 31.

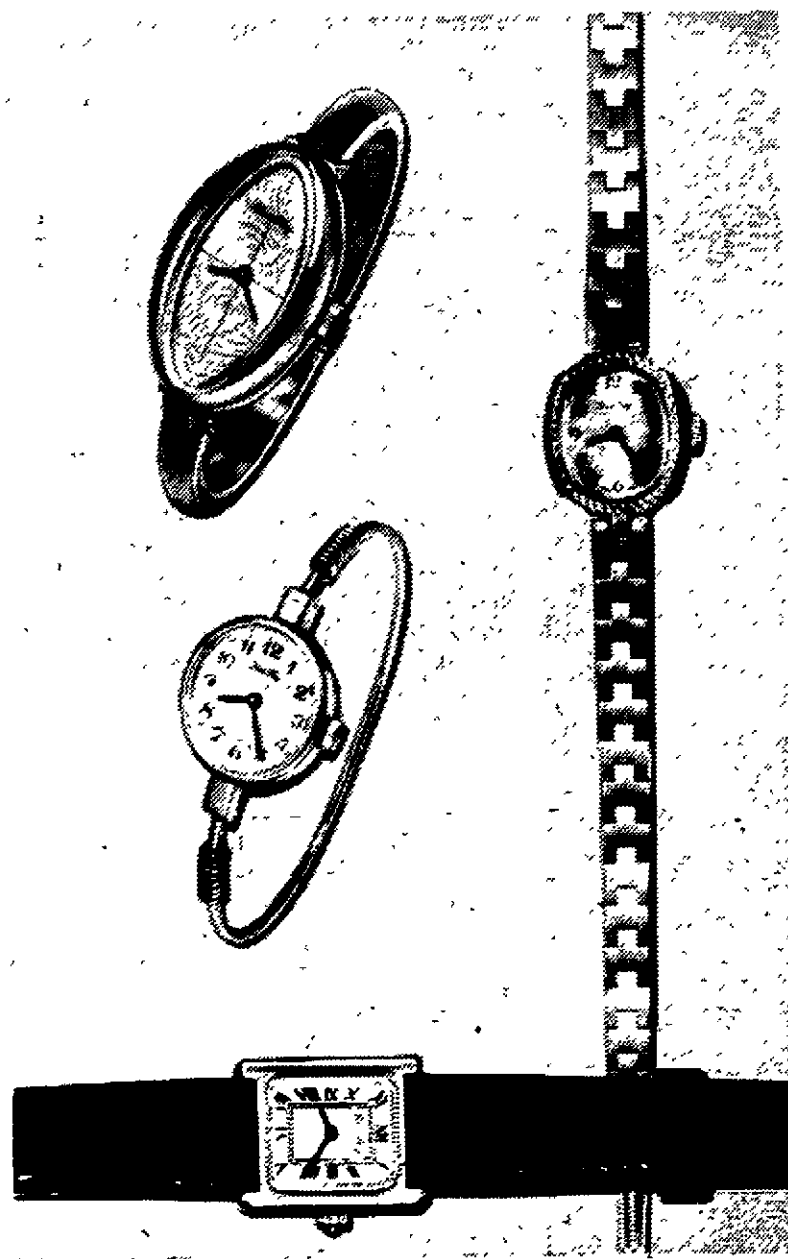

Roy A. Young, Lincoln campus chancellor, said the university did not have the estimated $40,000 to send the band to the bowl game.

"We must stay within our allowance for the bowl appearance and no other funds are available," Young said.

Robert Fought, marching band director, said, to the marching band members the news "will be like a dull pain."

The marching band faced a similar situation a year ago when a public fund drive raised enough money to pay the band's expenses to the Fiesta Bowl.

Rest Easy

Therapeutic Pillow

Prescribed by Leading Orthopedic Surgeons
... as an Aid in Relieving Cervical Strain and Tension

Since 1964 Doctors have had a new tool for use in cervical spine, low back pain cases and cardiac patients. The "REST EASY" Therapeutic pillow which supports both the head and neck, was invented by a former surgical technician and physician's assistant seeking relief and comfort from his own "whiplash" problem. The pillow was so effective for him that he presented it to the Orthopedic Surgeons in the hospital where he worked. Approx. 400 of the pillows were used in case studies, and it has been in great demand in the medical profession ever since the results of the studies were announced.

For almost five years it was sold exclusively through medical sources. Recently the "REST EASY" pillow has become available to the public through selected department stores.

In addition to its therapeutic uses, the pillow aids in the prevention of chin and neck wrinkles and relieves pressure while sleeping in hair rollers. The "REST EASY" pillow is also helpful while driving to support the small of the back on long trips.

X-ray photographs show neck vertebrae position with regular pillow and improved natural contour of neck vertebrae when "REST EASY" pillow is used.

Many people report that after only ten nights sleeping on the "REST EASY" pillow they will never again use another pillow. It is non-allergic and the cover is removable for washing.

Tension Aid
This versatile pillow eases tension while relaxing in your favorite chair or divan. It's easily placed in that right spot where you need additional support.

Sleeping Aid
Rest Easy takes the torture out of sleeping in rollers. Helps protect your hair set keeping it smooth and neat longer. With fewer beauty worries you naturally sleep better and wake-up refreshed.

Beauty Aid
Rest Easy helps keep you attractive by aiding in the prevention of chin & neck wrinkles. Ideal for soothing tension while relaxing in the tub or at pool side.

Witnesses for moving water

By Dominick Costello
Farm Editor

Blue Hill — A parade of witnesses favored moving water from the Platte River basin to the headwaters of the Little Blue River basin for an irrigation project at a hearing by the legislature's Agriculture Committee here Monday.

The witnesses failed to convince Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood, committee chairman, to support the project.

The project would irrigate approximately 60,000 acres in the parched area around Blue Hill. But it would require a change in the state law which prohibits transbasin diversion of water, which Sen. Schmit opposes.

"I haven't mellowed a bit. To support taking water from the Platte would break faith with the people who elected me. I can't do that," Schmit said.

A dozen farmers and businessmen from the area tried to convince the committee they should support the project.

Dave Mazour, manager of the Little Blue Natural Resources District, said the project would have very little effect on farmers irrigating along the Platte River because the water would be removed from the Platte only during the winter months.

Vernon Pearson of Shickley said, "The water we would take from the river would not affect the generation of electric power anywhere in Nebraska."

"The project would require very little energy because 78% of the area to be irrigated could be served by gravity flow," he added.

Bill Fitzke, manager of the Blue Hill cooperative, said, "A large area of Webster County would have had a crop to sell this year instead of federal disaster payments if we had irrigation. Even people who will not get water are supporting the project for the good of the community."

Wayne Ziebarth of Wilcox, representing the South Platte Chamber of Commerce, called for "a crash program to develop the state's water resources."

Don Nelson, state director of planning and programs, said his agency was neutral on the question of transbasin water diversion.

Nelson warned the committee "the Legislature must make a decision soon, however painful it may be."

"The alternative is to have the state's water laws made by court decisions," he said.

"I think water law should be made by the representatives of the people... not by the courts."

Veterinary appointment to be asked

Dr. Earl Dickinson, assistant dean of the School of Veterinary Medicine at Oregon State University, will be recommended to the Board of Regents for appointment as chairman of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's veterinary science department, effective April 1, 1977.

Dickinson holds B.S. and D.V.M. degrees from Colorado State University and practiced private veterinary medicine before receiving his Ph.D. from Washington State University in 1970. He joined the Washington State staff in 1965.

Topsoil, subsoil moisture lacking

Although snow was received in several areas of Nebraska last week, soil moisture supplies remained basically unchanged from the previous week, according to the Nebraska Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

Topsoil moisture is short in 99% of the counties, the service said in its weekly crop-weather report.

The condition of winter wheat remained the same as last week, although some areas experienced further deterioration while other areas reported slight improvement.

Moisture continues to be needed in all areas of the state, the service said. Snow cover will also be needed to provide adequate protection and additional moisture for the wheat, it was pointed out.

Corn harvest is virtually complete across the state. Last year's harvest had been completed much before now, while normal completion is only 96% at this time, the service said.

Precipitation received throughout the state during the past week included:

|              |                 |    |
| Chadron      | 11 North Platte | 64 |

League of Cities elects Nebraskan director

David Chambers, executive vice-president of the League of Nebraska Municipalities, was elected director of the National League of Cities board of directors at the annual Congress of Cities in Denver, Colo.

The 30-member board of directors sets the policy for the National League of Cities administrative activities. Chambers will serve a two-year term.

Grain alcohol plant favored

Blue Hill — A hearing by the Legislature's Committee on Agriculture found support for building a grain alcohol plant in Nebraska Monday.

Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood asked 60 farmers attending the hearing to answer three questions about a grain alcohol plant in writing.

Would you be interested in buying stock in an alcohol plant at $100 a share? Would you support a two-cent-a-bushel grain check-off on corn, milo, and wheat sold in Nebraska to pay for a grain alcohol plant if you received shares of stock in exchange for the money? Do you think the plant should be built with federal money?

Schmit refused to reveal the results of his survey until the end of the current series of hearings across the state.

Schmit said he would oppose a check-off program that would donate the plant to the state. "The farmers ought to own it if they pay for it. If it doesn't work out then we can donate it to the state as a sculpture dedicated to agriculture," he said.

Frances Ohmsted of Guide Rock said, "I would support the check-off provided the farmer gets to reap the harvest from the plant. Don't allow the state to take it over and sell it to some oil company."

Clayton Lukow of Holstein said, "I think there is more support for an alcohol plant than you suspect. The time to build one is now."

Schmit said if a plant isn't built soon, he will move to kill the gasohol committee he helped create in 1971 in the hope of getting a plant built.

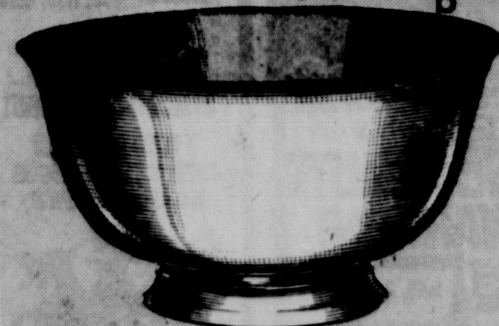

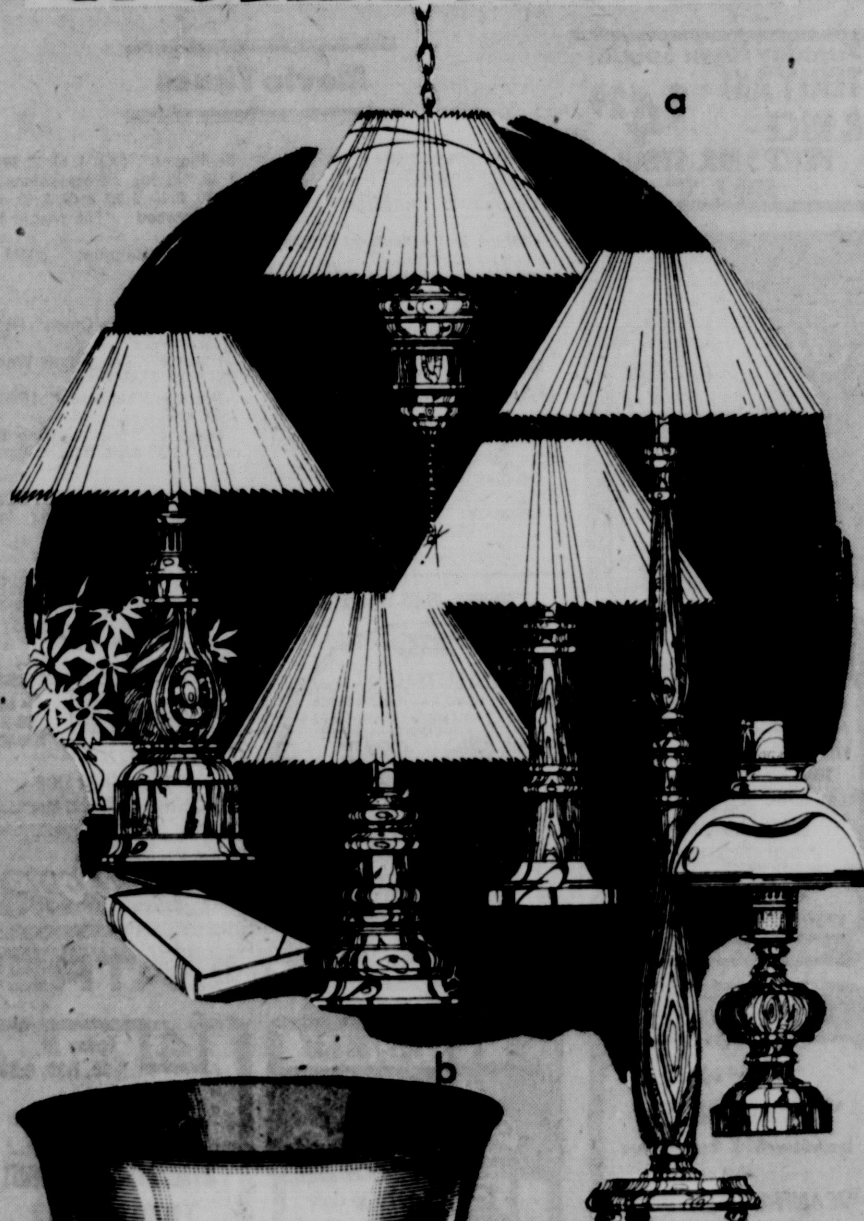

"It's time to fish or cut bait. Perhaps a move to kill the committee would act as an incentive to the committee and its administrator (Charles R. Fricke of Lincoln) to get moving," Schmit said.

Dworak said the state "has done a lousy job holding the line" in regard to the financial situation of state colleges because "we have no guidelines."

City creates 2nd woodpile

A second location has been established for free fireplace wood by the Lincoln Parks and Recreation Dept.

The wood available in a snowfenced area, at 32nd and Huntington will be mostly elm. It will be in truck lengths and will need to be cut for personal use. The daily supply will depend on the number of trees cut down by the city that day.

Home video games hot item this season

By Deb Gray, Star Staff Writer

The next big-selling newfangled gizmo for Christmas shoppers this year attaches to your television set and goes bleep, bleep.

The gift is a home video game. The most popular ones in Lincoln cost between $40 and $120.

For that price, consumers can purchase computerized control boxes that, when attached to the television antenna outlet, transform a television screen into an electronic court for tennis, handball, soccer or hockey. Some games have an electronic pistol that shoots targets on the screen.

"I'd venture to say, because of the price range, the games will be probably one of our top items, if not the top item this year," said Leslie Wright, manager of Lawlor's camera and television department. "It's like the pocket calculator craze a few years ago."

The games, which are similar to the electronic games entrenched in the arcade-and-bar-scene, are played on an unused television channel. A moving dot represents a ball or puck or other playing piece. A bar of light represents a ping pong paddle, tennis racket or player.

A player maneuvers his bar of light by turning a control-panel dial or hand-held knob. Different models have their own features, which include variable speeds and paddle sizes, color and sound.

Because the games operate through a television set, the Federal Communications Commission must approve them before the games are allowed on the market. The games must meet a number of technical standards: among them, making sure that the game doesn't cause visual interference with broadcasts on other channels.

Ron Romero, general manager at Schaefer's, said that some brands of the video games do not transmit as clear a picture on televisions with cable hookups. He said that disconnecting the cable when playing these games helps the transmission.

Richard Bates from Cablevision said he has not heard any complaints about interference between videogames and television reception among cable subscribers.

Not all of the more than 35 home video games now on the market are available in Lincoln, but here are some of the more popular models:

Christensen's has had good success selling Magnavox's Odyssey 500, the sales spurred by a special promotion. The game, which usually retails at $119.95, sells for $59.95 or $39.95 with the purchase of a television set. The Odyssey has stick-

Atari's Super Pong, available at Lawlor's and Stereo Studio, sells for about $90. The Super Pong plays four games: ping pong, superpong, catch and solitaire.

In the ping pong games, the ball automatically accelerates as the game progresses, making the game increasingly difficult.

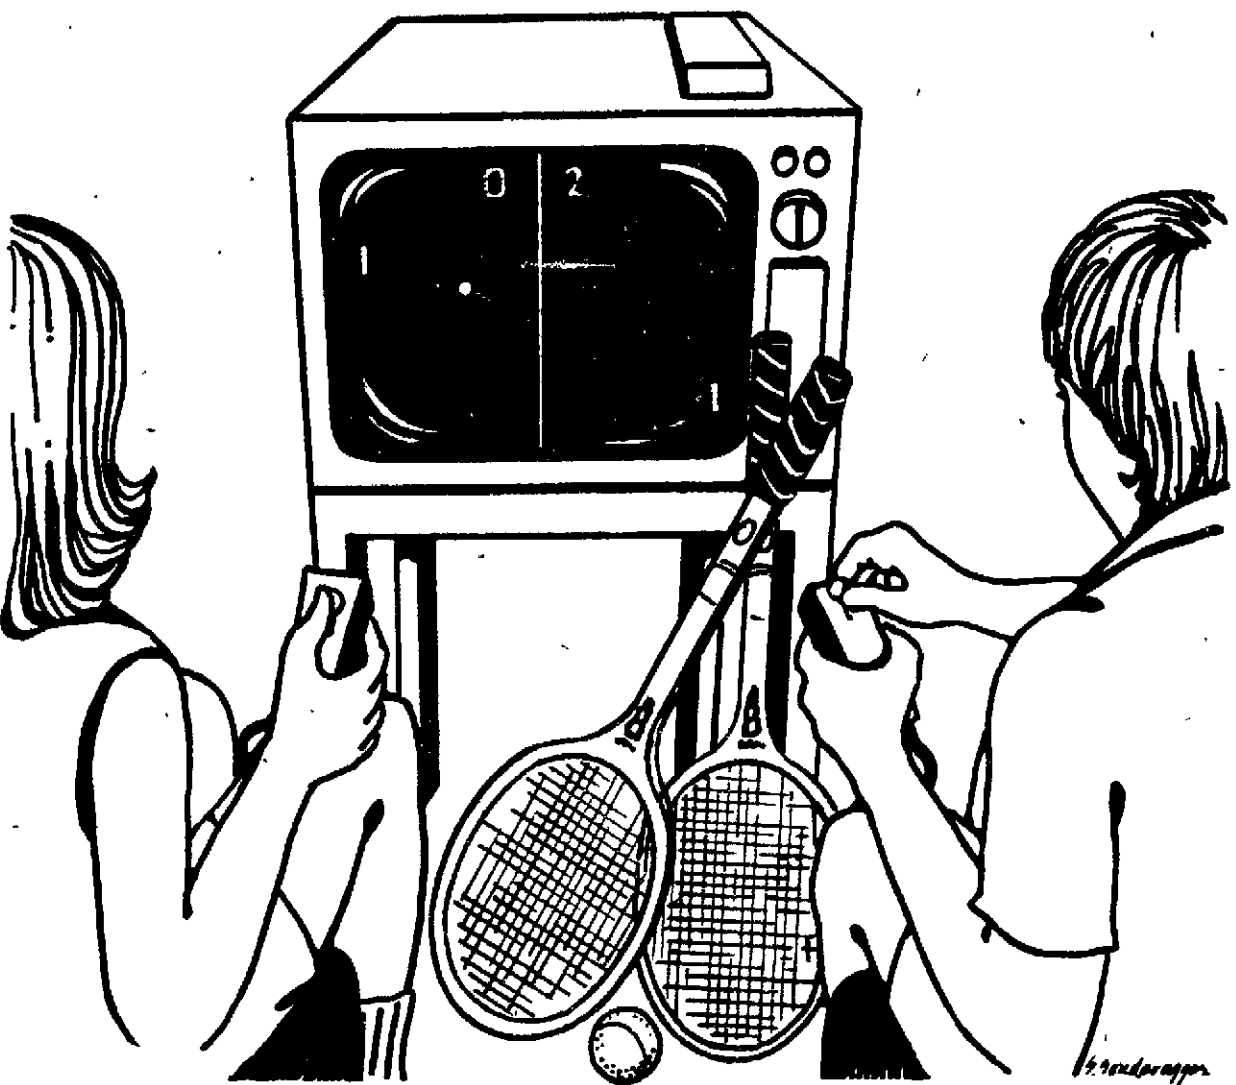

Lawlor's also stocks the Gulliver Triple Challenge, manufactured by the Gulliver Corp., which sells for $60. The game is equipped for handball, tennis and hockey.

With the Gulliver model, the player can set the speed of the game according to his level of proficiency: novice (slow speed), intermediate (medium speed) and high speed.

Another popular home video game at Lawlor's is the Zonk 4, manufactured by Phonemate Corp., a firm which also makes telephone answering devices.

The game is similar to the one put out by Gulliver, but a fourth game is added — a practice round so that a person can perfect his technique before taking on competition.

A testament to Zonk's popularity: Lawlor's is presently sold out of its original order of Zonk 4 games, which retail for $80. Another supply has been on order for a month.

Videotape recorders high-priced but convenient

By Deb Gray, Star Staff Writer

This Christmas, for a price of $1,300, consumers can do what television studios do — videotape programs for their own use.

For $1,300, a consumer can buy one of the home videotape cassette recorders. The most popular model now available in Lincoln is manufactured by Sony Corp.

With Sony's Betamax, which was introduced in Lincoln last April, a person can tape a television show for later viewing, start a library of recorded television programs or watch a show from a purchased, prerecorded cassette.

The Betamax comes in two models: the regular deck that attaches to a television set, and the tape deck with a 19-inch television built in. The console model costs $2,295.

Ron Romero, general manager at Schaefer's, said in spite of the cassette's high price, he has sold many cassette players.

"I think people like it, because they can program shows around them," he said. "If they work strange hours and would have to miss a program, they can record the program while they are gone and watch it at their convenience."

Bob Pavlik, vice president of Stereo Studios, said that after Sony's $3 million national advertising campaign to hawk the product, sales for the video-cassette have been good.

"At this point it's hard to keep in stock," he said. "It's perhaps our single hottest selling item."

But few other Lincoln stores stock the video-cassette, although the video players can be ordered through several stores. Some of these TV-sound dealers said response to the video-cassette machines in their stores has been tentative.

"It's such an expense item that people are reluctant to buy it until they can play around with it," said Leslie Wright, manager of Lawlor's camera and television department. "And we're reluctant to stock it just to allow people to play with it."

With a videotape recorder, a viewer can watch a show when he wants to, not only when it is broadcast, the Sony model includes a digital timer that can be set to automatically record a program.

The videotape recorders attach to any standard television set. They can record when the set is off and they also can record a show on one channel while another channel is being watched.

Sony's half-hour cassettes for the player cost $11.95. Hour-long tapes are $15.95. Wright said companies are now working to perfect tapes that will record longer than one hour, so eventually people can record longer programs, like movies.

Sony and Paramount Pictures Corp. next year plan to introduce pre-recorded videotapes of movies, sporting events, cultural programs and other entertainment programs that will be sold to videotape owners.

But other companies are toying with an idea that may give videotape manufacturers a run for their money.

This is the video-disc concept. For between $2 and $10, a consumer can buy half-hour and hour-long programs in-record form.

Video-disc players, which look like normal turntables, attach to the TV set and play records that transmit programs onto the screen. Both the RCA Corp. and MCA Inc. have designed video-disc systems that will sell for about $500.

But, in Lincoln, "nothing is yet available to my knowledge," Pavlik said.

Other electronic companies are competing in a different area: giant TV screens or television projection systems.

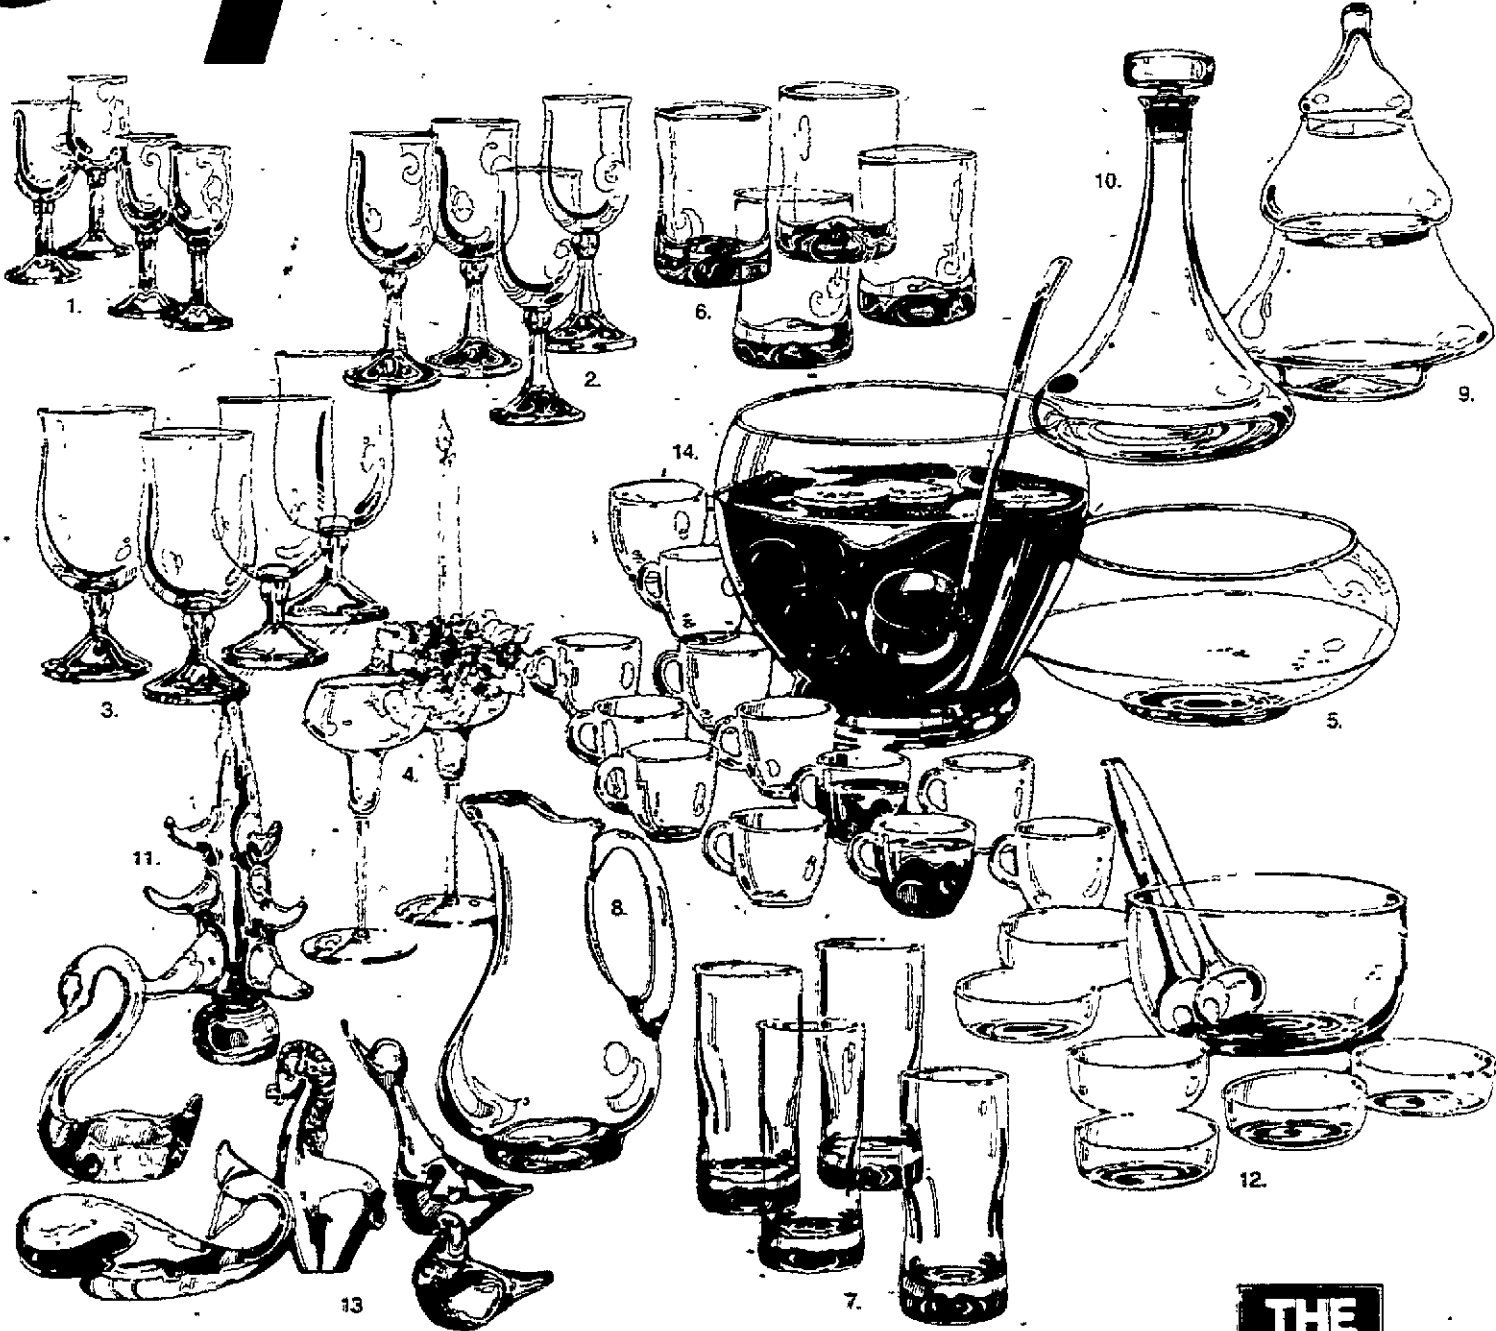

Advent Corp.'s VideoBeam Model 750, which is available through Stereo Studio, beams a picture from a projector onto a 4x6-foot screen six feet away.

The television projector system is now seen more in bars than in living rooms, although Pavlik said Stereo Studio has sold a few to consumers.

But when Advent raised the price of the system from $2,500 to $4,500 last June, the television projection system was "taken out of home use," Pavlik said.

Advent is now at work perfecting a model that may spur consumer sales. The model would have a smaller screen (3x5-foot instead of 4x6-feet) and would sell for $2,495.

The Betamax comes in two models: the regular deck that attaches to a television set, and the tape deck with a 19-inch television built in. The console model costs $2,295.

Ron Romero, general manager at Schaefer's, said in spite of the cassette's high price, he has sold many cassette players.

"I think people like it, because they can program shows around them," he said. "If they work strange hours and would have to miss a program, they can record the program while they are gone and watch it at their convenience."

Bob Pavlik, vice president of Stereo Studios, said that after Sony's $3 million national advertising campaign to hawk the product, sales for the video-cassette have been good.

"At this point it's hard to keep in stock," he said. "It's perhaps our single hottest selling item."

But few other Lincoln stores stock the video-cassette, although the video players can be ordered through several stores. Some of these TV-sound dealers said response to the video-cassette machines in their stores has been tentative.

"It's such an expensive item that people are reluctant to buy it until they can play around with it," said Leslie Wright, manager of Lawlor's camera and television department. "And we're reluctant to stock it just to allow people to play with it."

With a videotape recorder, a viewer can watch a show when he wants to, not only when it is broadcast. The Sony model includes a digital timer that can be set to automatically record a program.

The videotape recorders attach to any standard television set. They can record when the set is off and they also can record a show on one channel while another channel is being watched.

Sony's half-hour cassettes for the player cost $11.95. Hour-long tapes are $15.95. Wright said companies are now working to perfect tapes that will record longer than one hour, so eventually people can record longer programs, like movies.

Sony and Paramount Pictures Corp. next year plan to introduce pre-recorded videotapes of movies, sporting events, cultural programs and other entertainment programs that will be sold to videotape owners.

But other companies are toying with an idea that may give videotape manufacturers a run for their money.

This is the video-disc concept. For between $2 and $10, a consumer can buy half-hour and hour-long programs in record form.

Video-disc players, which look like normal turntables, attach to the TV set and play records that transmit programs onto the screen. Both the RCA Corp. and MCA Inc. have designed video-disc systems that will sell for about $500.

But, in Lincoln, "nothing is yet available to my knowledge," Pavlik said.

Other electronic companies are competing in a different area: giant TV screens or television projection systems.

Advent Corp.'s VideoBeam Model 750, which is available through Stereo Studio, beams a picture from a projector onto a 4x6-foot screen six feet away.

The television projector system is now seen more in bars than in living rooms, although Pavlik said Stereo Studio has sold a few to consumers.

But when Advent raised the price of the system from $2,500 to $4,500 last June, the television projection system was "taken out of home use," Pavlik said.

Advent is now at work perfecting a model that may spur consumer sales. The model would have a smaller screen (3x5-foot instead of 4x6-foot) and would sell for $2,495.

Siegman sees economic shortcomings.

Sociologist counts Lincoln lucky

By Linda Ollig
Star Staff Writer

Lincoln, Neb. Population: 170,000. State capital. Home of University of Nebraska.

Some say there was no logical reason a city should have sprung up here, in this particular spot in southeast Nebraska. It wasn't, isn't a railroad crossroads; it isn't near a river.

It must have been fate.

And through one sociologist's eyes, Lincoln is in "a fantastically fortunate position... the fates couldn't have made it any better."

Dr. Jack Siegman, University of Nebraska-Lincoln sociologist, was referring to Lincoln's social and political position, not its geographic.

The sociologist settled back in his chair in his Oldfather Hall office, an office that looks out over downtown Lincoln, the view stretching to the Capitol and County-City Building, and beyond.

Surrounded by text and resource books — "People and Plans," "The Society of Dissent," "Taking State Power," "Politics and Society" — Siegman discussed Lincoln: politically, socially, economically.

In this man's estimation, Lincoln is in better shape politically and socially than economically.

"Lincoln is isolated politically," he said. "It is the most progressively oriented community in the state, politically."

With a middle class base — due to the concentration of insurance companies, the university and other institutions of higher education, state government and white collar industry — Lincoln "is in a sense different than other parts and other communities of the state." Omaha has more industry; Nebraska as a whole is agricultural.

What sets Lincoln apart from the rest of the state is "the kind of open participation (in the political process) and receptivity, be it in degrees, of public bodies to citizen concerns."

"Because of the nature of its population," Lincoln is "an aggressive community whose citizenry articulates views," Siegman said. This creates a "healthy, vital, dynamic" atmosphere, one in which "even neighborhood groups are heard."

"There is not politically, not socially any kind of entrenched power" in Lincoln, he said.

Siegman admits that he may be looking at Lincoln through the tinted glasses of a community activist.

Siegman, the citizen, is on the Goals and Policies Committee, in the Lincoln Alliance, works with numerous neighborhood groups, sits on the Human Rights Commission and the Technical Committee, chairs the police review board and has been active in a number of political campaigns.

"This is a pretty open community... but Lincoln has many more miles to travel for integration of all its citizens" in the political and social processes, he said. Minorities, particularly blacks, are invisible, mainly because "We've done a lot to make them invisible."

"We could do more in Lincoln, Nebraska, a great deal more," he said.

"Given the economic as well as the educational level (of its citizens), Lincoln is far less supportive of cultural, intellectual leisure activities than it could be," he said.

"If Ames, Iowa," with a population of 30,000 "can have a major hall that attracts the New York Philharmonic and Moscow Symphony, I think Lincoln can look in shame," he said. There is move afoot to convert the old federal building into a performing arts center, but no one's sure what performers it would attract.

This city, he said, "has the people, has the resources but I'm not sure it has the will."

"Lincoln is behind other cities by 15 years," Siegman said. But that's not altogether bad... Lincoln has avoided many of the ills plaguing other, larger communities by learning from their mistakes.

Lincoln is lagging behind economically, he said. "The vision of the political, social, religious leaders is ahead of the economic leaders," Siegman said. The latter failed his test in "innovation and enhancement" of the community.

"The retail downtown doesn't exhibit the dynamism that is true of other cities," particularly in merchandising and attitude.

"In an economic sense, Lincoln is very traditional," Siegman said, pointing out that one of the most innovative merchandizing projects is the proposed Atrium which was not conceived locally, but grew out of Chicago.

Other than the Atrium, he said, there has been "no innovation here for 10 years"... Lincoln is behind in its conservative financial and retail orientation."

The economic community "is too much insulated," he said.

Far the opposite for Lincoln, the social community, he said. The New York native observed that "access into this community is very easy. If you want to get involved, no one's going to turn you off."

"It's not a closed social town," Siegman added. "Lincoln's beyond that. Lincoln is a plain town." Lincolinites "don't have airs, they don't dress up, they're not haughty."

In fact, "It may be too comfortable, too easy to fit in" because then "Lincoln commits you," Siegman said. "But it is not deserving of its anonymity because it's a very surprising place."

If only the economic structure were more progressive... "Then the problem will be that Lincoln will be too attractive to the people who aren't here now."

Kid's 'stupid' honesty wins him rich reward

Norfolk, Va. (UPI) — John Thompson, 16, who was called "stupid" by classmates for turning in $40 he found, has been showered with gifts for his honesty ranging from a $1,000 check to two turkeys.

"I just don't know what to say," said Thompson, whose low-income family receives food stamps. "I had no idea it was going to turn out like this."

Thompson found two $20 bills on the floor of his school bus on a day he didn't have any money for lunch. He gave it to the bus driver who returned it to an elderly woman who lost the money.

The bus company presented Thompson with a citation and the event was reported in a local newspaper. The publicity brought a statewide outpouring of gifts.

He received $1,525 in cash and checks, a $25 gift certificate, shoes, clothes, two turkeys, a ham and canned foods.

Givers included widows, handicapped and well-to-do parents who wrote that their children were provided for and that they wanted to do something for John.

By far the largest gift, a check for $1,000, came from a Richmond postman Thomas Cannon, who has earned a reputation as a philanthropist over the past several years.

In a letter to Thompson, he said he was moved by the boy's "monumental honesty and integrity."

Caroline Thompson, John's mother, said she taught her boy and her six other children to be honest.

"I was upset at first because after the story appeared some of his schoolmates were calling him stupid for turning in the money," she said. "And I didn't know whether we should accept the money or not."

"We're not poor but we are in need," she said. "Still there are other people out there who needed more."

She said her pastor convinced her to allow John and the family to keep the money and gifts. She said the pastor told her that "God wanted John to have this not because we are desperate, but because it is his way of rewarding John for his good deed."

Before John was showered with the money and gifts, Mrs. Thompson had been saving food stamps so "we could have some kind of Thanksgiving."

But thanks to John's honesty, she said, they had "a real one."

Puzzlemaker out to hoodwink customers

(c) N.Y. Times Service

New York — Stephen Richardson and Phyllis Orem try to deceive, mislead, hoodwink and outmaneuver their customers. They make wood jigsaw puzzles.

"We usually don't get super, super difficult unless we know the person can take it," explained Richardson, a founder of Stave Puzzles in Norwich, Vt. "There was one case where we got difficult right off, the people went wild and they didn't get any fun because it took them so long. We don't pull out all the stops unless we know they can take it. We can get dirty if we know the customer wants it."

The puzzle pieces come in three cuts: classic, described in the Stave catalogue as "full of heart-shaped interlocks, tending to be subtle, clever, inventive, insidious and tricky"; fantasy, described as "graceful, elegant pieces full of cloverleaf and arrowhead interlocks," and nightmare, which is "designed to bring out the masochist in all of us."

At Stave the prices range from $45 for a 160-piece classic cut to $385 for a 66-piece fantasy cut, though some special orders can be more. Richardson said that some customers had orders for as many as two puzzles a month and that one had spent as much as $6,000 a year for puzzles.

Richardson, who has a degree in mathematics, became a game creator after he was laid off from his job at a computer company in 1970. He said he was approached by two families, who were customers of Par Co. Ltd., a famous New York puzzle concern.

with it their supply of puzzles. One founder of Par, John N. Henriques, died in 1972 and the other, Frank Q. Ware, wanted to retire. The two families lent Richardson some Par puzzles, and he started studying.

In 1974, Richardson and a friend, who later sold out, opened Stave Puzzles, only to discover that Par had been given to Arthur Gallagher, a cutter with the company for many years. He changed the name to Par Picture Puzzles, moved the company to North Massapequa, New York. Fred Werner, a composer and arranger who used to rent Par Puzzles in the days when the company still had a lending service, opened another company, Catseyepuzzles, in Santa Monica, Calif. The supposedly dying craft was not only alive, it was proliferating.

Gallagher is unconcerned about the competition.

He said he was only 54 years old, and does not intend to retire or to teach anyone else the art of puzzlemaking. He will not tell what kind of glue he uses, what kind of saw, other than to say it is an electric jigsaw, or where he buys his wood. No photos can be taken in his workshop.

Richardson said it took him two years to learn the craft, experimenting with different woods, glues and cutting techniques. This year he trained an associate, Mrs. Urem.

Cutting a puzzle, he said, was a 30-step process and involves gluing an image — usually an art print or a lithograph — on wood, cutting it free-hand and sanding and polishing the wood, which consists of four layers of bass wood and a fifth layer of African, ribbon-striped mahogany. The last step is to initial and date a piece shaped like a small clown, the Stave logo.

"The trick of cutting a puzzle like this is to make the pieces optically similar but very different," he said. "And it took time to develop a smooth, rhythmic flow to our style so that typically it makes the puzzle very difficult to work with."

To make the puzzle more difficult, no picture is provided on the box and it is labeled with a misleading or phony title. For example, a picture of a whale with a harpoon on its side was labeled "Hole in One." Extra straight-edged pieces and corners, known as crooked corners, are thrown in to mislead customers.

In one case, Richardson said, an Arizona woman ordered six successive puzzles for her sister, each more difficult than the previous one. For Thanksgiving she ordered a puzzle made of a print of Morris the cat, seen in television commercials. To confuse her, the pieces for Morris were left out. The son, he said, to "really sock it to her." For her Christmas puzzle, a chariot scene, tiles on a background wall, are made into a miniature puzzle.

"It's just gonna be horrendous," he said. "The poor woman is just going to go crazy. She'll love it. We don't hold back. We really get vicious," he said.

Once, however, after cutting up Andrew Wyeth's painting "Christina's World," he looked at all the identical pieces of the wheat field and enclosed a bottle of aspirin. "We were so awed by our own work," he said, "we thought we'd better send something."

New York — Stephen Richardson and Phyllis Orem try to deceive, mislead, hoodwink and outmaneuver their customers. They make wood jigsaw puzzles.

"We usually don't get super, super difficult unless we know the person can take it," explained Richardson, a founder of Stave Puzzles in Norwich, Vt. "There was one case where we got difficult right off, the people went wild and they didn't get any fun because it took them so long. We don't pull out all the stops unless we know they can take it. We can get dirty if we know the customer wants it."

The puzzle pieces come in three cuts: classic, described in the Stave catalogue as "full of heart-shaped interlocks, tending to be subtle, clever, inventive, insidious and tricky"; fantasy, described as "graceful, elegant pieces full of cloverleaf and arrowhead interlocks," and nightmare, which is "designed to bring out the masochist in all of us."

At Stave the prices range from $45 for a 160-piece classic cut to $385 for a 66-piece fantasy cut, though some special orders can be more. Richardson said that some customers had orders for as many as two puzzles a month and that one had spent as much as $6,000 a year for puzzles.

Richardson, who has a degree in mathematics, became a game creator after he was laid off from his job at a computer company in 1970. He said he was approached by two families, who were customers of Par Co. Ltd., a famous New York puzzle concern.

The families were afraid the craft would die out and with it their supply of puzzles. One founder of Par, John N. Henriques, died in 1972 and the other, Frank Q. Ware, wanted to retire. The two families lent Richardson some Par puzzles, and he started studying.

In 1974, Richardson and a friend, who later sold out, opened Stave Puzzles, only to discover that Par had been given to Arthur Gallagher, a cutter with the company for many years. He changed the name to Par Picture Puzzles, moved the company to North Massapequa, New York. Fred Werner, a composer and arranger who used to rent Par Puzzles in the days when the company still had a lending service, opened another company, Catseyepuzzles, in Santa Monica, Calif. The supposedly dying craft was not only alive, it was proliferating.

Gallagher is unconcerned about the competition.

He said he was only 54 years old, and does not intend to retire or to teach anyone else the art of puzzlemaking. He will not tell what kind of glue he uses, what kind of saw, other than to say it is an electric jigsaw, or where he buys his wood. No photos can be taken in his workshop.

Richardson said it took him two years to learn the craft, experimenting with different woods, glues and cutting techniques. This year he trained an associate, Mrs. Urem.

Cutting a puzzle, he said, was a 30-step process and involves gluing an image — usually an art print or a lithograph — on wood, cutting it free-hand and sanding and polishing the wood, which consists of four layers of bass wood and a fifth layer of African, ribbon-striped mahogany. The last step is to initial and date a piece shaped like a small clown, the Stave logo.

"The trick of cutting a puzzle like this is to make the pieces optically similar but very different," he said. "And it took time to develop a smooth, rhythmic flow to our style so that typically it makes the puzzle very difficult to work with."

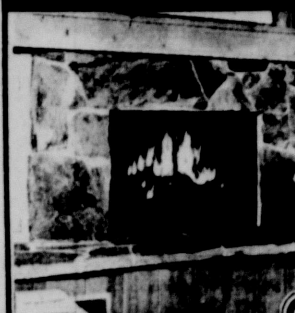

To make the puzzle more difficult, no picture is provided on the box and it is labeled with a misleading or phony title. For example, a picture of a whale with a harpoon on its side was labeled "Hole in One." Extra straight-edged pieces and corners, known as crooked corners, are thrown in to mislead customers.

In one case, Richardson said, an Arizona woman ordered six successive puzzles for her sister, each more difficult than the previous one. For Thanksgiving she ordered a puzzle made of a print of Morris the cat, seen in television commercials. To confuse her, the pieces for Morris were left out. The son, he said, to "really sock it to her." For her Christmas puzzle, a chariot scene, tiles on a background wall, are made into a miniature puzzle.

"It's just gonna be horrendous," he said. "The poor woman is just going to go crazy. She'll love it. We don't hold back. We really get vicious," he said.

Once, however, after cutting up Andrew Wyeth's painting "Christina's World," he looked at all the identical pieces of the wheat field and enclosed a bottle of aspirin. "We were so awed by our own work," he said, "we thought we'd better send something."

Golden arches mark hamburger holy place

Editor's note: The author of the following article has never — believe it or not — patronized a McDonald's restaurant.

By Susan Fogg
(c) Newhouse News Service

Washington — So you thought those golden arches were merely the symbol of the nation's (nay, the world's) most ubiquitous fast-food chain?

Not at all, says an anthropologist. Thanks to television and the automobile, McDonald's has become nothing short of a secular religion, the shelter below the golden arches a sacred place, a chapel.

"Tell your fellow Americans that going to McDonald's is similar in some ways to going to church or temple," Conrad Phillip Kottak said in a paper presented to the American Anthropological Association here, and they will greet the suggestion with "laughter, denial or doubts about your sanity."

Kottak, a professor of anthropology at the University of Michigan, regularly dines at the McDonald's on the Ann Arbor campus.

"Although McDonald's, for natives, is just a place to eat, careful observation of what goes on in any McDonald's outlet in this country will reveal an unsuspected and astonishing degree of formality and behavioral uniformity on behalf of staff and customers alike," Kottak said.

It is this ritual aspect of going to McDonald's that makes it more than just another fast-food restaurant — that lends it spirituality (though without theological doctrine).

"When we go in, our surroundings tell us we are in a sequestered place, somehow apart from the variety, messiness and variability of the world outside," said Kottak. "We know what we're going to see, what we are going to say, what will be said to us, what we will eat, how it will taste, and how much it will cost."

"From the rolling hills of Georgia to the snowy plains of Minnesota, with only minor variations, the menu is located in the same place, contains the same items and has the same prices."

"Obviously, customers are limited in what they can choose; less obviously, they are also limited in what they can say. . . . The neophyte customer who dares to ask, 'What kind of hamburgers do you have?' or 'What's a Big Mac?' is as out of place and ridiculous as a chimpanzee participating in a Roman Catholic Mass."

From that first request for a "Quarter-Pounder" to the final "Have a nice day," every move is ritualized, Kottak said, and advertising seeks to promote this image of McDonald's as a sanctuary from the profane.

"McDonald's commercials tell you that you are not simply a face in an amorphous crowd," he said. "You can find respite from a hectic and impersonal society, the break you deserve."

"McDonald's advertising effectively emphasizes the fact that the chain is, after all, a commercial organization. In the jungle you hear 'You, you're the one; we're fixing breakfast for ya' — not, 'You, you're the one; we're makin' millions off ya.'"

McDonald's promotes charitable and patriotic works, sponsors wholesome family entertainment shows on TV and generally projects itself, as religion once did, as a force "to maintain the values of American family life," Kottak said.

"They have ever suggested a means of strengthening what Americans conceive of as the weakest link in the nuclear family: father-child. 'Take a father to lunch,' the kids are told; love your father at McDonald's."

Traveling abroad, American tourists flock to McDonald's because "like a familiar church, (it) may offer comfort, security, confidence, relief and reassurance," he said.

Dear Abby

By Abigail
Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am 21 and Bill is 22, and we are both very mature. We have established a comfortable and caring relationship these past two years, both have good jobs and go to college part-time.

We have decided to get a two-bedroom apartment together, mainly to see if we can live together as a preparation for marriage. We already have a physical relationship, but we will have separate bedrooms for privacy when we want it.

Bill's parents already know and they don't approve, but they are slowly accepting it in hopes we'll marry soon. My parents live in another state. They are very religious and I don't want to tell them because they would never approve and I don't want to hurt them. Yet I love Bill very much and want to be sure that if we marry, it will work out. So many of our friends are already divorced.

I've told my parents that I am going to share an apartment with another girl. I'll have my own phone, so if they call me in the middle of the night, Bill won't accidentally answer it.

Let me know what you think, please.

ON MY OWN

DEAR ON: Living together, even with separate bedrooms, is no preparation for marriage.

And citing your friends' broken marriages is a copout. To live a lie because you're afraid of "hurting" your parents is wrong, because no matter how elaborate the plans for hiding the truth, it usually comes out.

If you were as mature as you claim to be, you'd be honest about your lifestyle and take the consequences.

DEAR ABBY: I saw the column advising the mother of a bedwetter to buy an electric device. We got one last April, and within two months, our 12-year-old son who had been a bedwetter all his life was cured!

I waited this long to thank you because I wanted to be sure it was permanent. It was, and we owe you our deepest gratitude. Our doctor hadn't been any help at all.

GRATEFUL IN BLAIRSDEN, CALIF.

DEAR GRATEFUL: Glad I could help. For a chronic bedwetter, happiness is a dry bed.

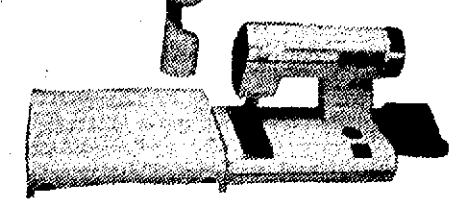

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (24c) envelope.

Opening lead — jack of hearts.

When either or both defenders have entered the bidding, declarer usually finds it much easier to gauge how their cards are divided. However, all such evidence is presumptive, not conclusive, and should be ignored when there are more reliable guidelines to follow.

For example, take this deal where South went wrong. West led a heart and declarer, mindful of West's overcall, finessed the queen. East took the king and South eventually lost three club tricks to go down one.

It is true that on the bidding West was far more likely than East to have the king of hearts. To that extent, declarer was unlucky to lose the finesse. However, South could have assured the contract 100 per cent by playing the ace of hearts from dummy at trick one! It was therefore wrong of him to have risked the finesse.

After taking the ace of hearts, declarer arranges an elimination play that is sure to succeed. He draws trumps, cashes the A-K of diamonds, and ruffs a diamond in dummy, creating this position:

Attitudes need changing

By Joanne Farris
DEAR JOANNE FARRIS: I have just read an article in your column entitled, "Why Women Drivers Arouse Wrath." My question is why don't men of any age understand why women, especially 40 and over, don't know anything about their cars? Most women have been taught their entire lives that tending to a car, even basic servicing, is a man's job. To reverse the process that has kept women unaware for so long does not often occur overnight. Sometime watch a woman driver apparently stranded from a flat tire on a freeway. She may have already changed the tire and be putting the flat away when a man drives up to take the messy job off her hands. Men's attitudes need changing also. Signed, A Woman Truck Driver.

Life Begins At Forty

COMMENT: Another Seattle reader replies to that same column in this way:

DEAR JOANNE FARRIS: I became rather incensed by your recent column featuring the inane letter from a man who criticized women for knowing little or nothing about their automobiles.

First of all, it should be quite obvious that women have had but a very limited opportunity to learn about cars. Their brothers, fathers, or husbands feel that mechanics is their domain and do not encourage the ladies' participation, in fact usually discourage it altogether. Women are encouraged to believe that they are more "feminine" knowing nothing about cars.

Unfortunately, too many men and boys are permitted to feel that it is "unmanly" for them to know and learn about maintaining a home. All children, boys and girls, should learn at least the basics in maintaining their living environment, cooking, washing, cleaning, the supervision of the children, and maintenance of house and automobile. A high degree of proficiency would be nice, but general basic knowledge in each area is a must.

Since I am a widower, I am glad I learned these things before I had to, when it was easier. Signed, I. L. S. Mackintosh.

Postcard

By Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — We are our neighbors' keepers. Across the icy street, behind the warm, lighted window, Whipstarch, is knocking back an early martini.

Mrs. Whipstarch turns her head from the open oven. I cannot read her lips. What can she be saying?

"So, Whipstarch! At the gin already, eh?" It is the season to be merry. (We are very close to neighbors in our new home. If the man would turn the bottle. I could read the label.)

"God rest ye merry, gentlemen," I said. "Fetch aft the rum." The moppets said admiringly: "The Cap'n got the Christmas spirit."

A little early for Christmas trees — though they've got a lot of them parked in the lot next to the supermarket. However, we do string lights around our roof edges now.

At the supermarket, I finally located where they keep the chopped walnuts. (We were planning a Betty Crocker cake with Black Forest icing.)

When I went down next day, they had rearranged the shelves. The walnuts were gone. In their place were Viva paper towels.

Science has known about these things for a long time. They took a bunch of laboratory rats and divided them in two groups. Group One lived like ordinary rats.

Group Two went into a cage with a little door. When a rat pushed through the door, he found chopped liver on the other side. Good-o!

Until — one day, a rat pushed open the door and got a blast of cold air instead.

The scientists then offered the two groups dishes of milk. One straight, the other laced with gin.

As you have guessed, the Group Two rats headed straight for the milk-and-squareface.

They said: "Did you feel that cold air where they used to keep the liver? Somebody ought to close the doors around here. Well, let's have one more. Then we'll eat. I have to get back to the office."

Attitudes need changing

By Joanne Farris
DEAR JOANNE FARRIS: I have just read an article in your column entitled, "Why Women Drivers Arouse Wrath." My question is why don't men of any age understand why women, especially 40 and over, don't know anything about their cars? Most women have been taught their entire lives that tending to a car, even basic servicing, is a man's job. To reverse the process that has kept women unaware for so long does not often occur overnight. Sometime watch a woman driver apparently stranded from a flat tire on a freeway. She may have already changed the tire and be putting the flat away when a man drives up to take the messy job off her hands. Men's attitudes need changing also. Signed, A Woman Truck Driver.

Life Begins At Forty

COMMENT: Another Seattle reader replies to that same column in this way:

DEAR JOANNE FARRIS: I became rather incensed by your recent column featuring the inane letter from a man who criticized women for knowing little or nothing about their automobiles.

First of all, it should be quite obvious that women have had but a very limited opportunity to learn about cars. Their brothers, fathers, or husbands feel that mechanics is their domain and do not encourage the ladies' participation, in fact usually discourage it altogether. Women are encouraged to believe that they are more "feminine" knowing nothing about cars.

Unfortunately, too many men and boys are permitted to feel that it is "unmanly" for them to know and learn about maintaining a home. All children, boys and girls, should learn at least the basics in maintaining their living environment, cooking, washing, cleaning, the supervision of the children, and maintenance of house and automobile. A high degree of proficiency would be nice, but general basic knowledge in each area is a must.

Since I am a widower, I am glad I learned these things before I had to, when it was easier. Signed, I. L. S. Mackintosh.

Postcard

By Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — We are our neighbors' keepers. Across the icy street, behind the warm, lighted window, Whipstarch, is knocking back an early martini.

Mrs. Whipstarch turns her head from the open oven. I cannot read her lips. What can she be saying?

"So, Whipstarch! At the gin already, eh?"
It is the season to be merry. (We are very close to neighbors in our new home. If the man would turn the bottle. I could read the label.)

"God rest ye merry, gentlemen," I said. "Fetch aft the rum." The moppets said admiringly: "The Cap'n's got the Christmas spirit."

A little early for Christmas trees — though they've got a lot of them parked in the lot next to the supermarket. However, we do string lights around our roof edges now.

At the supermarket, I finally located where they keep the chopped walnuts. (We were planning a Betty Crocker cake with Black Forest icing.)

When I went down next day, they had rearranged the shelves. The walnuts were gone. In their place were Viva paper towels.

Science has known about these things for a long time. They took a bunch of laboratory rats and divided them in two groups. Group One lived like ordinary rats.

Group Two went into a cage with a little door. When a rat pushed through the door, he found chopped liver on the other side. Good-o!

Until — one day, a rat pushed open the door and got a blast of cold air instead.

The scientists then offered the two groups dishes of milk. One straight, the other laced with gin.

As you have guessed, the Group Two rats headed straight for the milk-and-squareface.

They said: "Did you feel that cold air where they used to keep the liver? Somebody ought to close the doors around here. Well, let's have one more. Then we'll eat. I have to get back to the office."

Proposed peddler law amended

By Dean Terrell

Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Beatrice — An already revised peddlers and solicitors ordinance was amended Monday to cover retail sales only, then held by the city council for final consideration Dec. 20.

Discussed at several previous meetings, the proposal basically would require $25 permits plus surety bonds for all commercial door-to-door solicitations. Nonprofit groups would also need permits but without the fee.

Councilman Bill Johnson termed the measure "a minor rewrite of an ordinance already on the books," but it again provoked controversy. He said its main purpose is to close loopholes in an existing law which already calls for $25 occupation fees but is difficult to enforce.

force.

Speaking in opposition was Max Allender, a local monument salesman, who fears the new ordinance might set a precedent in surrounding communities. He said federal regulations on door-to-door selling are adequate protection for buyers.

If I had to buy a $25 license in every town where I sell, it would put me out of business," he said.

Mrs. Lillian Barker, district sales manager for Avon, also protested the measure. But her attitude softened when it was explained she would need only one permit for some 25 saleswomen in her charge.

In other action, the council approved the reappointment of Allen Grell as council president. Oaths of office were administered to newly elected councilmen Phil Cook and three who were re-elected: Harry Milke, Ray Smith, and Grell.

The council also:

- declined requests from Elmer Carel Jr. to reduce charges for landfill use.
- passed on final reading ordinance regulating distribution of hand bills.
- equalized assessments on paving districts 265, 268 and 270, plus paving projects 76-1, 76-2, 76-3 and 76-4.
- suspended rules and passed amendment to ordinance making city intoxication fines comply with state statutes.
- authorized Board of Public Works Manager Jim Bauer to sign agreement with Beatrice State Home on previously approved sewer line.
- approved preliminary replat of Country Club Estates subdivision.
- held executive session to discuss labor negotiations.

Squatters may leave

Culliacan, Mexico (AP) — Leaders of several thousand peasants agreed Monday to have the peasants withdraw within 48 hours from private farm land they invaded in Sinaloa state, the office of Gov. Alfonso G. Calderon announced.

Sunday, the state attorney general, Armado Estrada, had warned that the peasants would be removed "one way or another" if they refused to leave some 100,000 acres they had occupied in the northwestern Mexican state.

The withdrawal agreement was announced after Calderon, Estrada and other officials met with the leaders of the squatters who have been camping on the land for more than a week, blocking owners and their farmhands from their work.

Sources close to the negotiations said the peasants' leaders had agreed to back off until a federal judge rules on a landowners' petition asking that the invasion be ruled illegal.

Federal District Judge Jose Galvan Rojas has set Wednesday for a hearing on the petition and a decision could be forthcoming the same day.

The peasants' leaders told reporters some of the squatters had started to move off the land and farm work probably could resume Tuesday.

AMA reports inmate care lacking

Philadelphia (AP) — Jail inmates fail to get treatment for a variety of serious ailments, a survey by the American Medical Association shows.

Reporting "preliminary findings" at its 30th clinical convention, the AMA said Monday that its survey showed:

— Of inmates examined in an Indiana jail, 15% had positive tuberculosis skin tests, and in a small jail in Washington state, 15% of the prisoners who were examined had positive X-ray readings for TB.

— In a jail in Georgia, 66% of the inmates had abnormal urinalysis tests.

— In a Wisconsin jail, 27% of the inmates had abnormal readings for hepatitis. In an Indiana jail, 21% had positive hepatitis examinations.

The AMA said six state medical societies are involved in a pilot program to improve medical care and health services in correctional institutions in their states — Georgia, Indiana, Maryland, Michigan, Washington and Wisconsin.

The project, which began a year ago and will continue for another two, is being run with an annual budget of $497,752, with $448,003 from the federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration and $49,749 from the AMA.

"The ultimate objective of the program," the AMA said, "is information to be used for the development of a national certification system for jail medical programs, using approaches similar to those applied to the certification of hospitals and medical schools."

The federal grant followed a 1972 AMA survey of jail medical facilities "which showed a shocking lack of manpower and services throughout the country," the association said.

The 1,000 prisoners in the most recent survey were given physical examinations and their medical histories taken. In addition, jail facilities were surveyed, the AMA said, with these early findings:

- Only 37% had medical clinics.
- Routine physicals for all inmates on admission were given in only 13% of the jails.
- Routine physicals for such special categories as prisoners assigned to kitchen duties were given in only 37%.
- Treatment facilities for mentally ill offenders were available in 43% of the jails.

Workers sue for $2 million

Omaha (UPI) — Two Omaha Carpenters District Council Training and Education Fund employees have filed a $2 million lawsuit in U.S. District Court against the council and another union.

Gladys McCage and Violet Fouraker alleged the council and the Office and Professional Employees International AFL-CIO Local 53 conspired to deny them the benefit of a collective bargaining agreement.

The two employees contended a collective bargaining agreement should have been in effect at least since Jan. 1, 1975.

Had it been in effect since then, McCage and Fouraker said, they would have earned $16,373 more than they actually were paid because they would have allegedly received overtime pay and other fringe benefits.

In addition to asking for back wages, they asked for $1 million each for "mental distress, anguish and humiliation."

The two said they had been employees of the Training and Education Fund since Jan. 1, 1974. At that time, Local 53 began negotiating a collective bargaining agreement for the two plaintiffs with the Training and Education Fund.

However, the two women alleged that in October 1976, Local 53 refused to continue the collective bargaining negotiations and advised them they were no longer members of the union.

In addition, the plaintiffs alleged the Training and Education Fund has attempted to fire them solely because they requested the collective bargaining agreement.

McCage and Fouraker contended "at no time did Local 53 actively or vigorously attempt to bargain" in their behalf.

Instead, the plaintiffs alleged, Local 53 "acted in a concerted effort" with the District Council Training and Education Fund to deny them the benefit of a collective bargaining agreement.

Such acts were, they alleged, "intentional, deliberate and malicious."

McCage and Fouraker requested a jury trial in Omaha and the case was assigned to U.S. District Judge Robert V. Denney.

NWU president thanks Lincoln

Nebraska Wesleyan University President Vance D. Rogers praised Lincoln residents and business firms for NWU's successes the past two decades at a kick-off luncheon for the college's Great Teaching Program fund drive.

He said Lincoln businesses and individuals generously supported two major fund drives in the Decade for Fulfillment Program in the past two decades. Since the Great Teaching Program started in 1959, the college budget has jumped from $900,000 to more than $4,000,000, he said, with total assets rising from $5,000,000 to nearly $20,000,000.

Mrs. Ralph W. Hill, honorary co-chairman of the program this year, was given an NWU Distinguished Service Award for her many years of service to the college and the program.

YWCA sets decade's priorities

Preventive programs for all ages, particularly grade schoolers and women in their early teens, will be the number one priority item of the Lincoln YWCA in the next decade.

Such preventative programs would be aimed at stopping health, emotional, social problems before they develop. Ranking behind that will be:

- Programming for working women with children.
- And careful selection of programs, for the greatest diversity of people.

Radiologist: X-ray raised 'red flag'

By Lynn Zerschling
Star Staff Writer

An X-ray taken of Niles Towle the day before he died raised a "red flag" in the mind of a radiologist, he testified Monday, because the X-ray indicated Towle might have an abdominal infection.

Dr. O. S. Troester said after he read the X-ray on the morning of June 17, 1974, he tried to contact Dr. Robert Gillespie immediately. However, Dr. Troester said he found out Towle had died a few hours earlier.

That X-ray, taken on Sunday, June 16, has become one of the crucial pieces of evidence in the malpractice case against Dr. Gillespie and St. Elizabeth Health Center.

A witness for Towle's widow, who has brought the lawsuit against the surgeon and the hospital, said Monday that

X-ray was the most important sign in the case.

Dr. J. G. Allen, professor of surgery at Stanford University in Palo Alto, Ca., testified Dr. Gillespie was negligent because he didn't read that X-ray Sunday afternoon and perform corrective surgery on Towle.

Dr. Gillespie already has testified that such surgery would have been ill-advised and that he could not have done anything to prevent Towle's death.

Dr. Troester and Dr. Allen both agreed that the X-ray showed that there was free air under Towle's diaphragm. Because an earlier X-ray didn't show that air, Dr. Allen said the appearance of the air in the second X-ray indicated there was an infection caused by leakage of fecal material through a small hole in the abdomen.

Dr. Allen previously has contended Towle died from peritonitis, an infection caused by that leakage. Dr. Gillespie, on the other hand, said Towle died from the collapse of tiny air sacks in the lungs, or pulmonary atelectasis.

Under questioning from Dr. Gillespie's attorney, William Lamson, Dr. Allen asserted that "peritonitis generally causes atelectasis."

Dr. Allen was forced to admit, under tedious examination by Lamson, that Towle exhibited only two out of 24 clinical signs of peritonitis on Sunday, June 16. Those signs were a high fever and diarrhea, signs which Lamson argued were not unusual considering the type of surgery Towle had.

Apparently one of Dr. Allen's unsolicited answers prompted defense attorneys to request the judge to declare a mistrial in the case.

In response to a question from Fred Kauffman, attorney for the hospital, about his previous medical experience, Dr. Allen mentioned malpractice insurance.

Some reports indicated it was Dr. Allen's mention of insurance which prompted the mistrial motion. Reportedly, defense attorneys argued that the mention of insurance would prejudice the jury.

That request was made in private to District Judge William Blue and delayed the trial for several hours. Judge Blue overruled the motion and the trial continued.

Attorneys for Mrs. Towle have not yet told the jury how much money in damages they are requesting and attorneys for both sides have refrained from making any mention of malpractice insurance.

Testimony in the trial will continue Tuesday.

LES board votes to close its 'non-meeting' to public

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

They said it wasn't a real meeting.

But when a newspaper reporter showed up for the "informal discussion," the Lincoln Electric System (LES) board decided to close its non-meeting to the public.

"If this isn't a meeting then why are we going into executive session," asked board member Betty McClendon.

But the position of LES attorney Norman Krivosha prevailed. The meeting wasn't really a meeting, he said. But unless the board wanted to physically throw out the reporter, Krivosha suggested the members vote to go into executive session.

The meeting wasn't really a meeting under Nebraska's open meeting law, Krivosha said, because there was to be no discussion of public policy and no action taken.

The meeting had not been announced to the public or the news media. State law requires official agencies to notify the media of meetings.

The board was to hear information on pending litigation, possible lawsuits, real estate and operational procedures, Krivosha said.

Giving this background information to the entire board was much less time consuming than explaining it separately to each individual member, explained Board Chairman Tom Allman.

County Atty. Ron Lahners was unwilling to label the informal meeting a violation of the open meeting law without more information on the topics discussed.

But Lahners said his personal feeling is "anytime a public body meets as a group it should be an open meeting."

"The line between what is purely an administrative discussion and what is policy is hard to determine," said Lahners, explaining his preference for the "open meeting safest policy."

And Lahners has made this preference clear in several opinions and in private suggestions to governmental and advisory groups.

The county attorney's office suggested that all Lancaster County Board staff meetings be public, unless the entire meeting dealt only with administrative matters.

And the problem lies in determining what is purely administrative, the opinion on the County Board meetings said.

Mayor Helen Boosalis, who learned of the LES meeting through the news media, said she felt that the LES board might not be following the state law on open meetings.

Afraid You're Going Deaf?

Today, many hearing problems can be helped. Here is what thousands of people have done about it.

by David Smith

A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest Beltone aid of its kind will be given absolutely free to anyone answering this advertisement.

Send for this non-operating model, put it on and wear it in the privacy of your own home. It will show you how tiny hearing help can be, and it's yours to keep, free. The actual aid weighs less than a third of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Dept. 5067, Beltone Electronics, 4201 W. Victoria St., Chicago, Ill. 60646.

PSC hearing rescheduled

The Public Service Commission hearing on extended area telephone service between Ashland and Lincoln's common service area has been rescheduled from Dec. 16 to Jan. 31.

The hearing will begin at 9:30 a.m. in the PSC offices, 1342 M, according to Everett W. Green, commission secretary.

2 crashes fatal to 3

Associated Press

Three persons died in two accidents in Nebraska Monday.

A one-car mishap on Interstate 80 in Omaha claimed two lives and one person was killed in a two-car collision at a county road intersection three miles southeast of Hastings.

The name of the victim in that accident was withheld until relatives were notified.

Killed in the interstate accident were Charles Taylor, 41, and John Prince, 38, both of Omaha, who were passengers in a car driven by Manuel Thomas, 42, of Omaha. He was listed in serious condition at an Omaha hospital.

Police said the northbound car went out of control on the Martha Street bridge, crossed the median and hit an abutment.

The 1976 Nebraska highway fatality toll stands at 364 compared with 357 on this date one year ago.

MS drive presented check

Delta Tau Delta fraternity presented a $1,361 check Monday to Bruce Harmon, Muscular Dystrophy area chairman, as a result of a Burger King Whopper and Wash fund drive.

For the first time, fraternity members sold tickets for a dollar which entitled the buyer to a car wash and a "whopper" hamburger at Burger King. The fraternity and Burger King plan to make this fund drive an annual event, according to Dan Olson, fraternity member.

Ex-con indicted in coed's death

Riverhead, N.Y. (AP) — Sources close to the case said Monday that a Suffolk County grand jury has indicted a 27-year-old ex-convict on second-degree murder charges in a case where the victim was declared dead while still attached to a respirator.

When he was arrested last Wednesday, Walter Burton Carey III was charged with assaulting Karen Pomroy, 17, with an iron railroad spike while attempting to rob her.

After she was declared dead last Thursday, while still attached to a respirator, the charge against Carey was changed to second-degree murder.

The sources said Carey also was indicted Monday on a burglary charge.

Once Miss Pomroy was declared dead, her kidneys and corneas were removed for transplant, then the respirator was disconnected. She then stopped breathing.

Dr. William H. Bloom, a neurosurgeon who is president of the county medical society, said the respirator treatment could have been continued "perhaps for days" to force air into Miss Pomroy's lungs, but that she was "medically dead."

Miss Pomroy was beaten and robbed Nov. 29 near Islip High School, where she was a senior.

Radiologist: X-ray raised 'red flag'

By Lynn Zerschling
Star Staff Writer

An X-ray taken of Niles Towle the day before he died raised a "red flag" in the mind of a radiologist, he testified Monday, because the X-ray indicated Towle might have an abdominal infection.

Dr. O. S. Troester said after he read the X-ray on the morning of June 17, 1974, he tried to contact Dr. Robert Gillespie immediately. However, Dr. Troester said he found out Towle had died a few hours earlier.

That X-ray, taken on Sunday, June 16, has become one of the crucial pieces of evidence in the malpractice case against Dr. Gillespie and St. Elizabeth Health Center.

A witness for Towle's widow, who has brought the lawsuit against the surgeon and the hospital, said Monday that

X-ray was the most important sign in the case.

Dr. J. G. Allen, professor of surgery at Stanford University in Palo Alto, Ca., testified Dr. Gillespie was negligent because he didn't read that X-ray Sunday afternoon and perform corrective surgery on Towle.

Dr. Gillespie already has testified that such surgery would have been ill-advised and that he could not have done anything to prevent Towle's death.

Dr. Troester and Dr. Allen both agreed that the X-ray showed that there was free air under Towle's diaphragm. Because an earlier X-ray didn't show that air, Dr. Allen said the appearance of the air in the second X-ray indicated there was an infection caused by leakage of fecal material through a small hole in the abdomen.

Dr. Allen previously has contended Towle died from peritonitis, an infection caused by that leakage. Dr. Gillespie, on the other hand, said Towle died from the collapse of tiny air sacks in the lungs, or pulmonary atelectasis.

Under questioning from Dr. Gillespie's attorney, William Lamson, Dr. Allen asserted that "peritonitis generally causes atelectasis."

Dr. Allen was forced to admit, under tedious examination by Lamson, that Towle exhibited only two out of 24 clinical signs of peritonitis on Sunday, June 16. Those signs were a high fever and diarrhea, signs which Lamson argued were not unusual considering the type of surgery Towle had.

Apparently one of Dr. Allen's unsolicited answers prompted defense attorneys to request the judge to declare a mistrial in the case.

In response to a question from Fred Kauffman, attorney for the hospital, about his previous medical experience, Dr. Allen mentioned malpractice insurance.

Some reports indicated it was Dr. Allen's mention of insurance which prompted the mistrial motion. Reportedly, defense attorneys argued that the mention of insurance would prejudice the jury.

That request was made in private to District Judge William Blue and delayed the trial for several hours. Judge Blue overruled the motion and the trial continued.

Attorneys for Mrs. Towle have not yet told the jury how much money in damages they are requesting and attorneys for both sides have refrained from making any mention of malpractice insurance.

Testimony in the trial will continue Tuesday.

LES board votes to close its 'non-meeting' to public

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

They said it wasn't a real meeting. But when a newspaper reporter showed up for the "informal discussion," the Lincoln Electric System (LES) board decided to close its non-meeting to the public.

"If this isn't a meeting then why are we going into executive session," asked board member Betty McClendon.

But the position of LES attorney Norman Krivosha prevailed. The meeting wasn't really a meeting, he said. But unless the board wanted to physically throw out the reporter, Krivosha suggested the members vote to go into executive session.

The meeting wasn't really a meeting under Nebraska's open meeting law, Krivosha said, because there was to be no discussion of public policy and no action taken.

The meeting had not been announced to the public or the news media. State law requires official agencies to notify the media of meetings.

The board was to hear information on pending litigation, possible lawsuits, real estate and operational procedures, Krivosha said.

Giving this background information to the entire board was much less time consuming than explaining it separately to each individual member, explained Board Chairman Tom Allman.

County Atty. Ron Lahners was unwilling to label the informal meeting a violation of the open meeting law without more information on the topics discussed.

But Lahners said his personal feeling is "anytime a public body meets as a group it should be an open meeting."

"The line between what is purely an administrative discussion and what is policy is hard to determine," said Lahners, explaining his preference for the "open meeting safest policy."

And Lahners has made this preference clear in several opinions and in private suggestions to governmental and advisory groups.

The county attorney's office suggested that all Lancaster County Board staff meetings be public, unless the entire meeting dealt only with administrative matters.

And the problem lies in determining what is purely administrative, the opinion on the County Board meetings said.

Mayor Helen Boosalis, who learned of the LES meeting through the news media, said she felt that the LES board might not be following the state law on open meetings.

2 crashes fatal to 3

Associated Press
Three persons died in two accidents in Nebraska Monday. A one-car mishap on Interstate 80 in Omaha claimed two lives and one person was killed in a two-car collision at a county road intersection three miles southeast of Hastings.

The name of the victim in that accident was withheld until relatives were notified.

Killed in the interstate accident were Charles Taylor, 41, and John Prince, 38, both of Omaha, who were passengers in a car driven by Manuel Thomas, 42, of Omaha. He was listed in serious condition at an Omaha hospital.

Police said the northbound car went out of control on the Martha Street bridge, crossed the median and hit an abutment.

The 1976 Nebraska highway fatality toll stands at 364 compared with 357 on this date one year ago.

MS drive presented check

Delta Tau Delta fraternity presented a $1,361 check Monday to Bruce Harmon, Muscular Dystrophy area chairman, as a result of a Burger King Whopper and Wash fund drive.

For the first time, fraternity members sold tickets for a dollar which entitled the buyer to a car wash and a "whopper" hamburger at Burger King. The fraternity and Burger King plan to make this fund drive an annual event, according to Dan Olson, fraternity member.

Market is busy, optimistic

New York (AP) — The stock market took an optimistic look at economic prospects under President-elect Carter Monday and ran up a strong gain in the busiest trading session in 2 1/2 months.

Dow Ind. +11.22

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks climbed 11.22 points to 961.77 as blue chip issues, which have been lagging behind the general market lately, did some catching up.

That put the average at its highest close since it finished at 966.09 on Nov. 1 — the day before Carter won the presidential election.

Hog prices are higher

Omaha (AP) (USDA) — Hog prices were up but other livestock prices down on trading on the Omaha Livestock Exchange Monday.

Market is busy, optimistic

New York (AP) — The stock market took an optimistic look at economic prospects under President-elect Carter Monday and ran up a strong gain in the busiest trading session in 2 1/2 months.

Dow Ind. +11.22

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks climbed 11.22 points to 961.77 as blue chip issues, which have been lagging behind the general market lately, did some catching up. That put the average at its highest close since it finished at 966.09 on Nov. 1 — the day before Carter won the presidential election.

Insurance sales pitch is aimed at women

New York — Now that more women are earning money of their own, the life insurance industry is after them. "You have to be educated to your needs," says a brochure recently sent me by the Equitable Life Assurance Society. Once "educated" to Equitable's way of thinking, you'll be a pushover for the next insurance salesman who calls.

There is no doubt that more women should be insured. A working wife who helps support a family needs coverage in proportion to her financial contribution. For example, if her husband's salary can support only three-quarters of the basic household expenses, her insurance should cover the other quarter.

If she's the family's sole support, the insurance policy ideally should be large enough to support the children until they're grown. That's a lot of insurance, but even on a modest budget a woman can afford a good part of it if she buys a low-cost renewable term policy rather than expensive whole-life insurance. If she ever wants whole-life coverage, she can convert the term policy later. What bothers me about Equitable's brochure, however, is that it pitches life insurance for practically all women, which may not be appropriate. For example:

(1) "If I were married," says one of the women quoted in the brochure, "I would make sure I had a policy equal to my husband's. I do feel the women's role, the mother's role, is as important as the husband's."

This argument takes a sound feminist sentiment and twists it to suggest an action that could be enormously harmful to many women.

When a woman doesn't work, she and the children are entirely dependent on the husband for support. If half of the money available for insurance premiums is spent insuring the wife, it reduces the amount that the husband can afford to carry. If the wife dies, the husband gets an insurance payoff that he doesn't really need. But if the husband dies, the wife and children are up the creek. They have far less money to live on than if all the insurance had been carried on the husband's life.

Basically, insurance follows earnings. A wife needs 50% of the coverage if she is providing 50% of the household support. But if she's not working, or her earnings are so small that the husband can support the family without them, she shouldn't think about insurance for herself until her husband has sizable coverage — enough to provide her with an income for many years.

(2) "Recent studies have shown that it costs over $13,000 annually to replace a homemaker's services," says Equitable. This implies that housewives should be insured, so that if they die their husbands can have extra money for household help.

There's no doubt that wife insurance is nice protection for the husband when the children are young. In fact, if he bought in the amounts suggested he'd have a lot left over for investment, since it doesn't cost nearly $13,000 a year to hire babysitters or even a live-in housekeeper.

But should the family really be raiding a limited insurance budget to overprotect the husband (who is already protected by his earning power)? Doesn't it make more sense to buy a larger policy on his life, so that if he dies the dependent wife and children will have more money to live on?

(3) Says Equitable, "A single woman should have life insurance to protect the things she works for now — a good income, an attractive home, good clothes, vacations..." When she no longer works, she doesn't want to give up her way of life."

But a life insurance policy won't protect your way of life now. A single person might better consider disability insurance, which would help replace her income if she became unable to work.

At retirement she needs savings and investments to supplement Social Security, and one way to save is through a cash-value insurance policy. But if you don't have dependents, why pay for the insurance segment? Why not put the whole sum into savings, so you'll have an even larger retirement fund? Life insurance is only one of several competing financial planning tools.

(4) "I think I'd like to have a woman speak to me, because I wouldn't trust a man as much to tell me everything I need to know." To which end, Equitable kindly offered me the services of "qualified women insurance experts." But believe me, baby, it's not the sex of the salesman that counts, but his/her/its good sense.

1,101 Nebraskans lose their driving privileges

During November, 1,101 Nebraskans lost their driving privileges, the State Motor Vehicles Department announced Monday.

Director R. James Pearson said the total includes 123 revocations of licenses held by persons who accumulated 12 "points" for violations.

License suspensions included 296 for accidents, 187 for alcohol-related offenses and 265 for miscellaneous reasons. Another 230 were under the category of failing to file proof of financial responsibility.

Pearson noted this is the season when traffic accidents increase.

Stop Action

By Ken
Hambleton

There's no better way to improve a sport than to get the participants while they're young.

A recent addition to the local sports scene is Silver Gloves boxing for boys age 8-15. With a rousing opening card recently at the Moose Lodge, the program received such a great response it appears that Silver Gloves boxing may become a permanent fixture on the Lincoln sports scene.

More than 50 young fighters participated for a crowd of 400 and numerous supervisors.

Ron Stutzman, a four-time Southeast District Golden Gloves champion, who helped run the program along with Vern Wilson, coach of the Lincoln boxing team and the Moose Lodge, were almost overcome with offers of assistance in getting the program off the ground.

The Lincoln Jaycees will sponsor another Silver Gloves card in January and there may be other programs offered in the city in December.

The main impact of the Silver Gloves program is not that youngsters are learning how to box, but rather interest in boxing is high in Lincoln.

The kids learn a method of self defense, gain confidence and meet a lot of new friends. They also learn how to win and lose, graciously. (Something a few football fans could do).

Another positive aspect of the program will be the improvement of the Golden Gloves programs in the city.

Lincolniters have fared well in the Midwest championships, which involve Nebraska district winners. But a program starting boxers earlier can only improve the situation.

A prime positive example of Silver Gloves boxing is 16-year-old Tim Christensen of Central City. A "veteran" of more than 100 bouts, he showed impressive style and skill in the last AAU boxing night at Pershing Auditorium against a much older opponent.

AAU amateur boxing

The final amateur boxing card before the Southeast district championships in January is Wednesday at 8 p.m. in Pershing.

Ray Menefee, hoping to gain a record fifth district title, will face Jack Vega of the House of Shears in a prematch fight.

Vega has a 5-0 record and may be the best fighter in the city. He'll have to be in his best form for Menefee, who has not fought a trophy bout since October.

College basketball

Bellevue College sports information director Larry Wiseblood suggested the Lincoln newspapers start a state college rating system in basketball for the five best teams in the state.

"Rating teams would add interest and excitement and maybe provide some new rivalry to some teams," Wiseblood said.

Wiseblood also enclosed an example of his last season's final ratings in Nebraska. 1. Doane, 21-9; 2. Hastings, 20-8; 3. Kearney, 18-8; 4. Bellevue, 17-8; 5. Wayne, 14-11.

The ratings would provide a comparison of independents with the members of the Nebraska College Conference and the Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference.

Bowl ticket sales hot

Ticket sales for the Nebraska-Texas Tech Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl are proceeding rapidly, according to acting ticket manager Helen Ruth Wagner.

Wagner said Monday that her office has received approximately 7,000 ticket requests, not including student ticket sales that cut some 20% into the allotted 8,000 tickets from the bowl.

Wagner emphasized such numbers should not disturb those wanting tickets to the New Year's Eve contest in the Astrodome.

"Some of the requests don't have money with them," Wagner said. "So we're not sure how many of those will be filled. And we will be able to get more tickets from the bowl people if we need them, providing we make our request early enough."

Wagner also said she expects more ticket orders soon with the return of the Hawaii-vacationing Husker fans.

Sherrill to Pitt job

Pittsburgh (UPI) — First-year Washington State Coach Jackie Sherrill has resigned his job to return to top-ranked Pittsburgh, succeeding Johnny Majors as head coach, a Pitt spokesman announced Monday night.

Sherrill, former Pitt defensive coordinator and assistant head coach for three years under Majors, announced his decision at a news conference at the Pullman, Wash., campus a few minutes after Pitt sports information director Dean Billick announced it here.

Billick said Sherrill would give a news conference here at 11 a.m., EST, Tuesday at the suburban Greentree Holiday Inn.

Sherrill, 33, signed a five-year contract and planned to ask Majors' permission to talk with the present Pitt coaching staff, apparently hoping to keep as many as possible "on board."

"It is an excellent staff and has done a great job for Pitt," Sherrill said in remarks released here.

Pitt athletic director Casimir Mysliński said, "we're extremely happy to have Jackie coming back to Pitt, because he has played a large part in the success of our program."

Marquette rolls to win

Milwaukee (UPI) — Butch Lee scored 22 points, Bo Ellis 20 and Gary Rosenberger 18 Monday night as No. 2 ranked Marquette trampled previously unbeaten Western Michigan 78-53.

The win gave the Warriors, who lead 38-21 at the half, a 2-0 record. Tom Cutter had 14 for the Broncos, the defending Mid-American Champions who are now 3-1.

Marquette jumped off to a quick 19-2 lead on four points apiece by Lee and Ellis. When Western Michigan closed to 20-14 the Warriors ran off eight straight points to lead 28-14.

perSonics.

A year ago, Snyder said, the Knicks offered $3 million in cash and a key player to obtain the three-time NBA scoring champion. He said they had recently made a comparable offer.

An attorney for the Braves was in New York Monday to discuss a possible trade.

Michigan takes top spot in UPI poll

New York (UPI) — Michigan, runnerup to Indiana in the NCAA tournament last season, took over the No. 1 spot Monday in the first weekly United Press International board of coaches college basketball ratings.

The Wolverines, ranked second to Marquette in the preseason ratings, won their first two games of the season and received 22 first place votes and 368 points from 39 members of the coaches board who participated in this week's ratings.

Marquette, which has won its only game, got 16 first place mentions and 308 points and was in second place followed in order by UCLA, Nevada-Las Vegas, Kentucky, Alabama, Arizona, San Francisco and North Carolina.

Rounding out the second 10 are Notre Dame, Indiana, Tennessee, Wake Forest, Maryland, Louisville, Washington State, Southern Illinois, Oregon and Clemson.

Alabama, Notre Dame, Wake Forest, Washington State, Southern Illinois, Oregon and Clemson all were unranked in the preseason ratings. Wake Forest beat two top ranking clubs — North Carolina and North Carolina State — and won the Big Four Tournament for the third straight year to gain its ranking.

North Carolina, which dropped from No. 3 in the preseason ratings to No. 9, was one of four powerhouses to meet defeat early.

Indiana, the two-time defending UPI national champion, was stunned by Toledo last week and dropped to 12th in the ratings after being listed as No. 5 in the preseason rankings; Maryland was beaten by Notre Dame in its season opener and dropped from No. 11 to No. 15 and Louisville was upset by Syracuse and fell from No. 8 to No. 16.

Six coaches from each of the seven geographical areas of the nation comprise the UPI ratings board. Each week they vote on the top 10 teams and points are awarded on a 10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 basis for votes from first through 10th.

Carty, Carbo, Scott traded to former clubs

Los Angeles (AP) — Veteran sluggers George Scott and Rico Carty returned to their old teams Monday and the Milwaukee Brewers completed two separate major deals at baseball's winter meetings.

The Brewers swapped Scott and outfielder Bernie Carbo in exchange for first baseman Cecil Cooper after earlier sending catcher Darrell Porter and pitcher Jim Colborn to Kansas City for infielder Jamie Quirk, outfielder Jim Wohlford and a player to be named later.

Carty, claimed by Toronto from Cleveland in the expansion draft a month ago, returned to the Indians in a deal that sent catcher Rick Cerone and utilityman John Lowenstein to the Blue Jays.

In two straight cash transactions, Milwaukee claimed veteran catcher Larry Haney on waivers from Oakland and Boston sold infielder Bobby Heise to Kansas City.

The Brewers-Red Sox swap had the day's best names. Scott, 32, batted .274 with 18 homers and 77 runs batted in for Milwaukee. He spent the first six years of his major league career with Boston before being traded to the Brewers in 1972. In five years with Milwaukee, he set club records in homers, RBI and batting average.

Cooper, who will be 27 next week, batted .282 with 15 homers and 78 RBI for the Red Sox in 1976, his third full season in Boston.

Carbo was traded to Milwaukee by Boston in midseason and batted .236.

Scott was the key as far as the Red Sox were concerned. "We needed that righty power hitter," said General Manager Dick O'Connell. "We're glad to have big George back and we got an old friend in Carbo, too."

It was the same situation for Carty.

Phil Seghi, Cleveland's general manager, admitted he had hesitated about exposing the 36-year-old veteran who batted .310 for the Indians last season.

"At this time, we debated about it," said Seghi. "We felt Rico would not be taken on the first round and that I would withdraw him after that."

But the Blue Jays grabbed Carty.

"We drafted Rico with two thoughts," said Toronto GM Peter Bavasi. "We felt he might be a commodity other clubs would be interested in for a subsequent deal, or he could be a fine hitter for us and a stabilizer in our youth program."

The first alternative developed when the Indians decided they wanted Carty back and were willing to part with two players to get him.

It was the second trade between the two teams. Earlier, Toronto had selected pitcher Al Fitzmorris in the expansion draft from Kansas City and then shipped him to Cleveland for catcher Alan Ashby and first baseman Doug Ault.

The loss of Fitzmorris by the Royals helped spur the Kansas City-Milwaukee trade, with Colborn, who was 9-15 for the Brewers last season, expected to inherit his spot in the KC starting rotation.

In other transactions, Minnesota purchased outfielder Glenn Adams from the San Francisco Giants and seven minor leaguers were drafted by big league clubs.

But the Royals-Brewers swap was the first significant deal of the meetings. And Porter was the key.

"Two years ago, you couldn't acquire him," said Royals

Manager Whitey Herzog. "We know he had an off year, but we hope he can bounce back."

Porter, 24 and a five-year veteran, will battle Buck Martinez, the Royals' regular catcher last season, for a starting job.

The Royals lost reserve catcher Bob Stinson to Seattle in the expansion draft and were anxious to bolster their backstopping. They were hot on the trail of free agent Gene Tenace, until the bidding for the ex-Oakland catcher got too high.

Tenace eventually signed with San Diego and Kansas City went shopping elsewhere.

The Milwaukee-Kansas City swap came just before the draft session, where four ex-major leaguers were among the seven players chosen at $25,000 apiece.

The first pick was right-handed pitcher Tom Carroll, selected by Montreal. Carroll, once one of the brightest prospects in the Cincinnati organization, was 9-12 at Charleston of the International League last year.

St. Louis picked the minor league Player of the Year, outfielder-first baseman Roger Freed, who batted .309 with 42 home runs and 109 runs batted in at Denver. Freed, 30, flunked previous big league trials with Baltimore, Philadelphia and Cincinnati.

Los Angeles went for infielder Teddy Martinez, who has played for the New York Mets, St. Louis and Oakland. Minnesota picked outfielder Rich Chiles, previously with the Mets and Houston.

Former Cubs' manager Marshall goes to LA circus

By Dave Nightingale

(c) Chicago Daily News

Los Angeles — It is a circus, these baseball winter meetings. A production that even the late, great Ringling Bros., Barnum and Bailey could not envision.

It is a series of owners and general managers, falling over each other in the headquarters' hotel tavern . . . making clandestine calls to each other's 100-a-day suites . . . attempting to maintain a reasonable degree of sobriety in the never-ending battle against the ravages of Jack Daniels and his friends.

But, saddest of all, it is the panhandlers . . . the out-of-work stiffs who live in the sterility of the hotel lobby, trying to implant the vision of their jobless faces in the minds of the moguls. The men who wonder where their next meal is coming from if they don't get hired to manage at Port Arthur, Tex., or super-scout it for the Seattle Seagulls.

To the lobby of the Hilton Hotel here came the wryly smiling, toupee-clad figure of James Rufus Marshall.

Not as a panhandler, per se. But as a jobseeker who got a full-fledged shaft. A jobseeker in search of, or wait for, restitution.

James Rufus managed the Chicago Cubs during another season of mediocrity in 1976. (No mean feat, for you or I could have managed the Cubs to another season of mediocrity in 1976).

Marshall, of course, was not the cause of the mediocrity. And, in truth, he was not the scapegoat. For, when the Cubs' search for hope turned to the Camelot of (Bob) Kennedy, a "clean sweep" of existing personnel was mandatory. A fact that James Rufus could understand.

What Jim Marshall could not understand was the timing of his demise. He was handed his walking papers at an hour of the year when major league baseball teams were not hiring washroom attendants, let alone guiding geniuses.

It may hurt Chuck Tanner's feelings to learn this. But if the Cubs had made known their intentions of sacking Marshall as early as Nov. 15, then Jim wouldn't be wondering about the cost of his next hamburger.

He would be wondering if Willie Stargell, Al Oliver, Rennie Stennett and Richie Zisk had enough collective talent to overhaul Philadelphia in 1977.

Because Marshall was the handpicked successor to Danny Murtaugh as manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Hand-picked by Joe Brown, former Pirate general manager . . . but a man still holding a direct pipeline to the ear of owner John W. Galbreath.

Hand-picked until Harding Peterson, Joe Brown's successor, got tired of waiting for the Cubs to fish or cut bait and opted for Tanner (at the cost of catcher Manny Sanguillen), the nebulous native of New Castle (Pa.), who was definitely expendable at Oakland.

In one respect, James Rufus Marshall is fortunate. Because he was employed by an organization with a so-called heart. (which is not mandatory in the great national pastime.)

Because he was employed by a man (P. K. Wrigley) with a sense of compassion.

"Sometime on Tuesday," said Marshall. "I'm going to have a meeting with John Holland (ex-general manager; now "consultant" for the Wrigley baseball empire).

"It is my understanding that Mr. Wrigley (P.K.) realizes that I was relieved of duties at a time when I could not possibly have a chance of being hired for a comparable position.

"It is my understanding that Mr. Holland has been empowered to offer me some form of compensation."

Buffalo confirms plans to possibly trade McAdoo

Buffalo (AP) — Buffalo center Bob McAdoo could be wearing the uniform of another National Basketball Association team very soon, Braves co-owner Paul Snyder said Monday.

"I told McAdoo yesterday that if we can't sign him today we're going to trade him," Snyder told a news conference.

Snyder said McAdoo's new team could be either the New York Knicks or the Seattle SuperSonics.

A year ago, Snyder said, the Knicks offered $3 million in cash and a key player to obtain the three-time NBA scoring champion. He said they had recently made a comparable offer.

An attorney for the Braves was in New York Monday to discuss a possible trade.

"We met this afternoon, then he called Buffalo to relay our discussion," said Donovan.

"Hopefully something will happen one way or the other pretty soon. We are now awaiting a reply."

Seattle, meanwhile, reportedly was willing to pay $2 million in cash and swap 7-foot-4 center Tom Burleson.

Owner Sam Schulman of the Seattle SuperSonics confirmed he had been in contact with the Braves about McAdoo.

"I'd always be interested in a player of his talent," Schulman said. "But it would be very premature for me to make any comment. I don't want to make any comments on personnel— who's involved, if anybody. I don't want to get into specifics. Sometimes these types of transactions can be cash transactions."

Snyder said McAdoo, in the final year of a five-year contract, was being paid $400,000 annually—$200,000 in cash and $200,000 in deferred payments.

McAdoo, Snyder said, had agreed to a new five-year pact worth $500,000 a year, $350,000 in cash and $150,000 in deferred pay.

"But his agent (William Madden) would not accept the $500,000," Snyder said. "He wanted some other things and I turned him down." Snyder did not elaborate.

Snyder, who bought the Braves from a New York City investment firm shortly after Buffalo was awarded an NBA franchise in 1970, prefaced the news conference by announcing he had signed papers that completed selling half interest in the club to Louisville millionaire John Y. Brown Jr.

"John and I are equal partners," Snyder said. "We'll work together."

He made no mention of a possible transfer of the Buffalo franchise to the Kentucky city, where Brown has said he wants a team. Brown formerly owned the Kentucky Colonials of the now-defunct American Basketball Association.

Snyder also said he had reached agreement Sunday with the agent for Buffalo guard Randy Smith, now playing out his option.

"His agent said he would recommend to Randy that he accept the offer which is more than twice what we've been paying him," Snyder said.

Smith, a seventh-round draft in 1971 out of Buffalo State, reportedly earned $100,000 a year.

Stop Action

There's no better way to improve a sport than to get the participants while they're young.

A recent addition to the local sports scene is Silver Gloves boxing for boys age 8-15. With a rousing opening card recently at the Moose Lodge, the program received such a great response it appears that Silver Gloves boxing may become a permanent fixture on the Lincoln sports scene.

More than 50 young fighters participated for a crowd of 400 and numerous supervisors.

Ron Stutzman, a four-time Southeast District Golden Gloves champion, who helped run the program along with Vern Wilson, coach of the Lincoln boxing team and the Moose Lodge, were almost overcome with offers of assistance in getting the program off the ground.

The Lincoln Jaycees will sponsor another Silver Gloves card in January and there may be other programs offered in the city in December.

The main impact of the Silver Gloves program is not that youngsters are learning how to box, but rather interest in boxing is high in Lincoln.

The kids learn a method of self defense, gain confidence and meet a lot of new friends. They also learn how to win and lose, graciously. (Something a few football fans could do).

Another positive aspect of the program will be the improvement of the Golden Gloves programs in the city.

Lincolinites have fared well in the Midwest championships, which involve Nebraska district winners. But a program starting boxers earlier can only improve the situation.

A prime positive example of Silver Gloves boxing is 16-year-old Tim Christensen of Central City. A "veteran" of more than 100 bouts, he showed impressive style and skill in the last AAU boxing night at Pershing Auditorium against a much older opponent.

AAU amateur boxing

The final amateur boxing card before the Southeast district championships in January is Wednesday at 8 p.m. in Pershing.

Ray Menefee, hoping to gain a record fifth district title, will face Jack Vega of the House of Shears in a prematch fight.

Vega has a 5-0 record and may be the best fighter in the city. He'll have to be in his best form for Menefee, who has not fought a trophy bout since October.

College basketball

Bellevue College sports information director Larry Wiselblood suggested the Lincoln newspapers start a state college rating system in basketball for the five best teams in the state.

"Rating teams would add interest and excitement and maybe provide some new rivalry to some teams," Wiselblood said.

Wiselblood also enclosed an example of his last season's final ratings in Nebraska. 1. Doane, 21-9; 2. Hastings, 20-8; 3. Kearney, 18-8; 4. Bellevue, 17-8; 5. Wayne, 14-11.

The ratings would provide a comparison of independents with the members of the Nebraska College Conference and the Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference.

Bowl ticket sales hot

Ticket sales for the Nebraska-Texas Tech Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl are proceeding rapidly, according to acting ticket manager Helen Ruth Wagner.

Wagner said Monday that her office has received approximately 7,000 ticket requests, not including student ticket sales that cut some 20% into the allotted 8,000 tickets from the bowl.

Wagner emphasized such numbers should not disturb those wanting tickets to the New Year's Eve contest in the Astrodome.

"Some of the requests don't have money with them," Wagner said. "So we're not sure how many of those will be filled. And we will be able to get more tickets from the bowl people if we need them, providing we make our request early enough."

Wagner also said she expects more ticket orders soon with the return of the Hawaii-vacationing Husker fans.

Sherrill to Pitt job

Pittsburgh (UPI) — First-year Washington State Coach Jackie Sherrill has resigned his job to return to top-ranked Pittsburgh, succeeding Johnny Majors as head coach, a Pitt spokesman announced Monday night.

Sherrill, former Pitt defensive coordinator and assistant head coach for three years under Majors, announced his decision at a news conference at the Pullman, Wash., campus a few minutes after Pitt sports information director Dean Billick announced it here.

Billick said Sherrill would give a news conference here at 11 a.m., EST, Tuesday at the suburban Greentree Holiday Inn.

Sherrill, 33, signed a five-year contract and planned to ask Majors' permission to talk with the present Pitt coaching staff, apparently hoping to keep as many as possible "on board."

"It is an excellent staff and has done a great job for Pitt," Sherrill said in remarks released here.

Pitt athletic director Casimir Myslinski said, "we're extremely happy to have Jackie coming back to Pitt, because he has played a large part in the success of our program."

Marquette rolls to win

Milwaukee (UPI) — Butch Lee scored 22 points, Bo Ellis 20 and Gary Rosenberger 18 Monday night as No. 2 ranked Marquette trampled previously unbeaten Western Michigan 78-53.

The win gave the Warriors, who lead 38-21 at the half, a 2-0 record. Tom Cutter had 14 for the Broncos, the defending Mid-American Champions who are now 3-1.

Marquette jumped off to a quick 10-2 lead on four points apiece by Lee and Ellis. When Western Michigan closed to 20-14 the Warriors ran off eight straight points to lead 28-14.

An attorney for the Braves was in New York Monday to discuss a possible trade.

"We met this afternoon, then he called Buffalo to relay our discussion," said Donovan. "Hopefully something will

James Rufus managed the Chicago Cubs during another season of mediocrity in 1976. (No mean feat, for you or I could have managed the Cubs to another season of mediocrity in 1976).

Marshall, of course, was not the cause of the mediocrity. And, in truth, he was not the scapegoat. For, when the Cubs' search for hope turned to the Camelot of (Bob) Kennedy, a "clean sweep" of existing personnel was mandatory. A fact that James Rufus could understand.

What Jim Marshall could not understand was the timing of his demise. He was handed his walking papers at an hour of the year when major league baseball teams were not hiring washroom attendants, let alone guiding geniuses.

It may hurt Chuck Tanner's feelings to learn this. But if the Cubs had made known their intentions of sacking Marshall as early as Nov. 15, then Jim wouldn't be wondering about the cost of his next hamburger.

He would be wondering if Willie Stargell, Al Oliver, Rennie Stennett and Richie Zisk had enough collective talent to overhaul Philadelphia in 1977.

Because Marshall was the handpicked successor to Danny Murtaugh as manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Hand-picked by Joe Brown, former Pirate general manager... but a man still holding a direct pipeline to the ear of owner John W. Galbreath.

Hand-picked until Harding Peterson, Joe Brown's successor, got tired of waiting for the Cubs to fish or cut bait and opted for Tanner (at the cost of catcher Manny Sanguillen), the nebulous native of New Castle (Pa.), who was definitely expendable at Oakland.

In one respect, James Rufus Marshall is fortunate.

Because he was employed by an organization with a so-called heart, (which is not mandatory in the great national pastime.)

Because he was employed by a man (P. K. Wrigley) with a sense of compassion.

"Sometime on Tuesday," said Marshall, "I'm going to have a meeting with John Holland (ex-general manager; now "consultant" for the Wrigley baseball empire).

"It is my understanding that Mr. Wrigley (P. K.) realizes that I was relieved of duties at a time when I could not possibly have a chance of being hired for a comparable position.

"It is my understanding that Mr. Holland has been empowered to offer me some form of compensation."

Buffalo confirms plans to possibly trade McAdoo

Buffalo (AP) — Buffalo center Bob McAdoo could be wearing the uniform of another National Basketball Association team very soon, Braves co-owner Paul Snyder said Monday.

"I told McAdoo yesterday that if we can't sign him today we're going to trade him," Snyder told a news conference.

Snyder said McAdoo's new team could be either the New York Knicks or the Seattle SuperSonics.

A year ago, Snyder said, the Knicks offered $3 million in cash and a key player to obtain the three-time NBA scoring champion. He said they had recently made a comparable offer.

An attorney for the Braves was in New York Monday to discuss a possible trade.

"We met this afternoon, then he called Buffalo to relay our discussion," said Donovan. "Hopefully something will happen one way or the other pretty soon. We are now awaiting a reply."

Seattle, meanwhile, reportedly was willing to pay $2 million in cash and swap 7-foot-4 center Tom Burleson.

Owner Sam Schulman of the Seattle SuperSonics confirmed he had been in contact with the Braves about McAdoo.

"I'd always be interested in a player of his talent," Schulman said. "But it would be very premature for me to make any comment. I don't want to make any comments on personnel—who's involved, if anybody. I don't want to get into specifics. Sometimes these types of transactions can be cash transactions."

Snyder said McAdoo, in the final year of a five-year contract, was being paid $400,000 annually—$200,000 in cash and $200,000 in deferred payments.

McAdoo, Snyder said, had agreed to a new five-year pact worth $500,000 a year, $350,000 in cash and $150,000 in deferred pay.

"But his agent (William Madden) would not accept the $500,000," Snyder said. "He wanted some other things and I turned him down," Snyder did not elaborate.

Snyder, who bought the Braves from a New York City investment firm shortly after Buffalo was awarded an NBA franchise in 1970, prefaced the news conference by announcing he had signed papers that completed selling half interest in the club to Louisville millionaire John Y. Brown Jr.

"John and I are equal partners," Snyder said. "We'll work together."

He made no mention of a possible transfer of the Buffalo franchise to the Kentucky city, where Brown has said he wants a team. Brown formerly owned the Kentucky Colonels of the now-defunct American Basketball Association.

Snyder also said he had reached agreement Sunday with the agent for Buffalo guard Randy Smith, now playing out his option.

"His agent said he would recommend to Randy that he accept the offer which is more than twice what we've been paying him," Snyder said.

Smith, a seventh-round draft in 1971 out of Buffalo State, reportedly earned $100,000 a year.

Melton: NU got bad start with Playboy

Kansas City (AP) — Big Eight Conference football coaches traded quips, barbs and congratulations Monday at their annual meeting at conference headquarters.

"We started off our season all wrong," said Nebraska assistant John Melton, standing in for Tom Osborne, the reserved, religion-oriented head coach. "We had Tom Osborne in Playboy."

The magazine with the famous centerfold picked the Huskers to win the national championship and included a picture of Osborne.

"Lots of these coaches here assembled probably belong in Playboy," Melton said. "But not Tom Osborne."

Referring to Oklahoma's 20-17 victory over the Huskers, in which the Sooners used two flea-flicker passes in their winning drive in the game's final minute, Melton said, "In 38 seconds we went from first to fifth. This is the only league where that could happen."

Pittsburgh party cut

Pittsburgh (AP) — Coach Chuck Noll pooped the party his Pittsburgh Steelers planned for Monday night to view the nationally televised game between the Oakland Raiders and Cincinnati Bengals.

"The single most important thing we have to do now is get ourselves ready to play Saturday down in Houston," said the coach, who reminded his players they must be in their homes under an 11 p.m. team curfew.

The outcome of the Monday night game figured to go a long way toward making or breaking the Steelers' bid to overtake Cincinnati in the National Football League's American Conference Central Division.

The team party had been set for a nearby restaurant partly owned by Steeler safety Mike Wagner, and ABC had planned to interrupt the Monday night game with some live coverage of the gathering.

Louisville rolls to win

Louisville, Ky. (AP) — Larry Williams scored 17 of his 19 points in the first half Monday night to lead seventh-rated Louisville to an easy 89-60 college basketball victory over Virginia Commonwealth.

Louisville, 2-1, took control early in the first half after the visitors held a 9-8 lead with 15:34 to play.

"Barry," he turned to Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer, "those calls were pure genius. They were a stroke of genius."

"Who said we couldn't pass?" said Switzer, whose team had not attempted a pass their previous two games.

Switzer, who guided the Sooners to a three-way tie with Colorado and Oklahoma State for the league title, committed an embarrassing faux pas when his turn came.

"First," he said, "I want to congratulate Jim Stanley of Oklahoma State and John Melton of Nebraska for winning a share of the Big Eight championship."

Colorado Coach Bill Mallory looked, for a fleeting second, very confused.

"Sorry about that, Bill," Switzer said red-faced. "Don't know what I was thinking of."

"You're living in the past," someone suggested.

"I was beginning to wonder if you knew something I didn't know," said Mallory.

Mt. Marty clobbers Wesleyan

Yankton, S.D. — Mt. Marty used its 6-8, 6-9, 6-9 front line to its advantage Monday night as the Lancers completely dominated the rebounds and pounded Nebraska Wesleyan 84-60.

The Lancers' 6-8 Bill Dawson pulled down 14 rebounds and scored 17 points which Rich Shipp, a 6-9 junior, had 18 points and 10 caroms and 6-9 freshman Dan Dickes scored 12 points and had eight rebounds for the winners.

Angelo Lilly, the

Plainsmen's leading scorer this season, scored 15 points while sophomore forward Bob Otto tallied 14 points.

The Lancers, now 6-1, tallied 60 rebounds to NWU's 29. Mt. Marty also connected on 32 of 66 field goal attempts while Wesleyan hit just 27 of 86 attempts.

The Plainsmen, now 2-2, will return to Lincoln to host Kansas Wesleyan and Sterling College of Kansas on Friday and Saturday respectively at the Ira J. Taylor Gym on the NWU campus.

The Lancers, who never trailed, jumped to a 30-10 lead with 6:23 left in the first half, and connected on their first 10 of 12 field goal attempts.

Eulogy recalls Murtaugh wit

Chester, Pa. (AP) — Danny Murtaugh was buried Monday after prayers by a priest who was his pinocchio partner and recollections of the quick wit of the four-time manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Rev. I. Walter Noll, pastor emeritus of Our Lady of Peace Roman Catholic Church, recited the opening prayers at the funeral services. Earlier, he remembered once criticizing a Murtaugh managerial decision and being told, "Father, you stick to the pulpit and I'll run the baseball team."

Murtaugh was buried at Sts. Peter and Paul Cemetery close to the sandlots which spawned him as a major league baseball player and later a premier manager. His flag draped casket was carried by members of his family.

"Danny won the admiration of the whole civilized world," said the Rev. Francis P. O'Reilly in a brief eulogy.

"Now, all stand up as he dashes across the homeplate of life."

A number of Pittsburgh players and other baseball personalities jammed the small, grey-stone church in Milmont Park to pay last respects to the quiet, little Irishman who died Thursday, two days after suffering a stroke.

Kentucky pounds Indiana

Bloomington, Ind. (UPI) — Fifth-ranked Kentucky overwhelmed defending national champion Indiana in the first half Monday night and ended the Hoosiers' 35-game winning streak on their home court, 66-51.

The setback was the first time in three years that IU has lost back-to-back games and marked the first occasion in Coach Bobby Knight's six-year tenure that Indiana has been below .500.

Kentucky completely dominated the game after Jay Shidler hit the first basket to give the Wildcats a 2-0 advantage. The visitors rolled into a 21-point advantage, 36-15 with 3:10 remaining before intermission and held a 38-21 edge at the break.

Three times in the second half, Indiana trimmed the lead to 13 points — the last time at 64-51 with two minutes left.

The Wildcats shot 46.7 per cent from the field in the first 20 minutes and finished at 51 per cent for the game. IU was a dismal 32 per cent at half-time and finished with 42 per cent. The Hoosiers had the rebounding edge, 43-31.

Shidler and Larry Johnson each scored 20 points to pace Kentucky and Jack Givens contributed 18.

Kent Benson, the 6-foot-11 All-America center, was the only Hoosier player in double figures with a game-high 21 markers.

The last time Indiana lost at home was three years ago when Notre Dame visited the Assembly Hall and left a 73-67 winner. The only other time in the previous 61 games that the Hoosiers lost was an overtime decision to Wisconsin in 1972.

Bryan gymnast is ineligible

Omaha (AP) — A nationally-ranked high school gymnast whose goal is to be an Olympic competitor has been ruled ineligible to compete this season for her high school, Omaha Bryan.

Renee Reisdorff, 15, violated a Nebraska School Activities

Association rule barring participation in outside competition in the athlete's sport during the school season, Jim Riley, NSAA executive secretary, said Monday.

Miss Reisdorff was disqualified for entering a regional meet in Missouri.

NWU defeats frigid Doane

Crete — Doane led 27-26 at the half, but was outscored 21-10 as Nebraska Wesleyan University took a 47-37 victory in women's basketball here Monday night.

It was the season opener for Doane while NWU saw its record climb to 1-2.

Doane, which went 5-for-42 in field goal shooting the second half, will host Dana Thursday.

Melton: NU got bad start with Playboy

Kansas City (AP) — Big Eight Conference football coaches traded quips, barbs and congratulations Monday at their annual meeting at conference headquarters.

"We started off our season all wrong," said Nebraska assistant John Melton, standing in for Tom Osborne, the reserved, religion-oriented head coach. "We had Tom Osborne in Playboy."

The magazine with the famous centerfold picked the Huskers to win the national championship and included a picture of Osborne.

"Lots of these coaches here assembled probably belong in Playboy," Melton said. "But not Tom Osborne."

Referring to Oklahoma's 20-17 victory over the Huskers, in which the Sooners used two flea-flicker passes in their winning drive in the game's final minute, Melton said, "In 38 seconds we went from first to fifth. This is the only league where that could happen."

Delegates to the World Boxing Council convention which begins Wednesday will decide how to determine a successor to apparently retiring heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali. WBC president Jose Sullaman of Mexico City said Monday.

"Barry," he turned to Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer, "those calls were pure genius. They were a stroke of genius."

"Who said we couldn't pass?" said Switzer, whose team had not attempted a pass their previous two games.

Switzer, who guided the Sooners to a three-way tie with Colorado and Oklahoma State for the league title, committed an embarrassing faux pas when his turn came.

"First," he said, "I want to congratulate Jim Stanley of Oklahoma State and John Melton of Nebraska for winning a share of the Big Eight championship."

Colorado Coach Bill Mallory looked, for a fleeting second, very confused.

"Sorry about that, Bill," Switzer said red-faced. "Don't know what I was thinking of."

"You're living in the past," someone suggested.

"I was beginning to wonder if you knew something I didn't know," said Mallory.

Mt. Marty clobbers Wesleyan

Yankton, S.D. — Mt. Marty used its 6-8, 6-9, 6-9 front line to its advantage Monday night as the Lancers completely dominated the rebounds and pounded Nebraska Wesleyan 84-60.

The Lancers' 6-8 Bill Dawson pulled down 14 rebounds and scored 17 points which Rich Shipp, a 6-9 junior, had 18 points and 10 caroms and 6-9 freshman Dan Dickes scored 12 points and had eight rebounds for the winners.

Angelo Lilly, the

Plainsmen's leading scorer this season, scored 15 points while sophomore forward Bob Otto tallied 14 points.

The Lancers, now 6-1, tallied 60 rebounds to NWU's 29. Mt. Marty also connected on 32 of 65 field goal attempts while Wesleyan hit just 27 of 86 attempts.

The Plainsmen, now 2-2, will return to Lincoln to host Kansas Wesleyan and Sterling College of Kansas on Friday and Saturday respectively at the Ira J. Taylor Gym on the NWU campus.

The Lancers, who never trailed, jumped to a 30-10 lead with 6:23 left in the first half, and connected on their first 10 of 12 field goal attempts.

Eulogy recalls Murtaugh wit

Chester, Pa. (AP) — Danny Murtaugh was buried Monday after prayers by a priest who was his pinocchio partner and recollections of the quick wit of the four-time manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Rev. I. Walter Noll, pastor emeritus of Our Lady of Peace Roman Catholic Church, recited the opening prayers at the funeral services. Earlier, he remembered once criticizing a Murtaugh managerial decision and being told, "Father, you stick to the pulpit and I'll run the baseball team."

Murtaugh was buried at Sts. Peter and Paul Cemetery close to the sandlots which spawned him as a major league baseball player and later a premier manager. His flag draped casket was carried by members of his family.

"Danny won the admiration of the whole civilized world," said the Rev. Francis P. O'Reilly in a brief eulogy.

"Now, all stand up as he dashes across the homeplate of life."

A number of Pittsburgh players and other baseball personalities jammed the small, grey-stone church in Milmont Park to pay last respects to the quiet, little Irishman who died Thursday, two days after suffering a stroke.

Clear goal in mind

The Minnesota North Stars have a big goal in mind in this billboard advertising their desires to win the coveted Stanley Cup. The cartoon drawings are of the comedy team Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy.

Colorado tops Jacksonville

Boulder, Colo. (AP) — Five Colorado players, led by Emmett Lewis, combined for 70 points Monday night as the Buffaloes whipped winless Jacksonville University 89-72 in college basketball.

Lewis poured in 22 points as Colorado outmaneuvered the Dolphins, who never led and came no closer than 12 points to the Buffs in the second half of the non-conference game.

Other Buffs with double-digit totals were Larry Vaculik 15, Clayton Bullard 12, Dave Bolen 11 and Toney Ellis 10.

Connors to sit after win?

Las Vegas, Nev. (UPI) — At age 24, after winning nearly every major championship, Jimmy Connors is not yet talking of retirement, but he is fearful that if he doesn't slow down his pace, he may burn himself out.

Connors said he was forced to withdraw from U.S. Davis Cup competition early next year because of a back injury he suffered during the Pacific southwest in Los Angeles last September, which was aggravated during a recent tournament in Europe. He said he went against his doctor's order to compete here in a semifinal round of the $320,000 winner-take-all WCT Challenge Cup.

Struggling through two tie-breakers Sunday, Connors defeated Vitas Gerulaitis 5-7, 7-6, 7-6, 6-1 to win $50,000 and advance to the finals of the Challenge Cup April 10 in Las Vegas.

The flamboyant tennis star has scheduled a luncheon in Culver City, Calif., Wednesday.

Norton, Bobick set bout

New York (AP) — Ken Norton and Duane Bobick met Monday to formally announce that their on-and-off heavy-weight fight is on again, probably in February at Madison Square Garden. But they were overshadowed by the voice of Boxing Past — Muhammad Ali.

On Nov. 18, Bobick and Norton signed to fight. But then Ali let it be known that he was interested in defending against Bobick, and Norton agreed to withdraw.

But Monday, Ali once again contended that fighting for him was in the past and that the heavyweight championship was vacant.

Speaking by telephone from Louisville, Ky., to a Norton-Bobick news conference at Madison Square Garden, Ali said:

"I'm through with boxing.

I've done everything I can. I'm just too great to hang around and end up on my back. One hundred million dollars can't get me back into the ring."

Asked if he had formally notified the World Boxing Association and the World Boxing Council of his retirement, Ali said he hadn't. Then he addressed James A. Farley, the New York State Athletic Commission chairman who attended the news conference:

"I want to announce to the commissioner that he can take my name off the list."

"I would like it to be a title fight," said Norton who will get $500,000 for his first fight since he lost a controversial 15-round decision to Ali last Sept. 28 in Yankee Stadium. It was three days later, in Turkey, that Ali first announced his latest retirement.

Report on Sunday liquor accepted

By Gordon Winters
Star Staff Writer

The city's fermenting vat of liquor questions continued to bubble Monday as the City Council formally accepted a report recommending Sunday alcohol sales and more licenses.

The council has yet to make any changes in city law as a result of the recent report from the citizen committee it created several months ago.

Nonetheless businessman Dan Leahy told the council that he hurried his application for a First National Bar and Crust Co. when he heard about the proposal to lift the city's quota on liquor licenses.

The application for the restaurant-cocktail lounge at 2650 N. 48th in University Place brought crowds of detractors and supporters to the council chambers.

Leahy told the council that the University Place business "needs a change, new life." He said it is currently offering little for students at nearby Nebraska Wesleyan University.

His plans call for using the old vaults and other fixtures in the bank building as part of the decor, Leahy told the council.

But Jack Paustian argued that there has never been a liquor establishment near the NWU campus since it became part of the city 50 years ago and that it is not time to change that situation.

Bars contribute to brawls, shootings and stabbings, he said, citing what he said were police warnings to female NWU students not to walk on the streets in the area at night.

"No wonder we hear about students' graduating from college who can neither read or write," said Mrs. Fred Patzel of the Womens Christian Temperance Union: Alcohol kills brain cells, she said, and college students need all the brain cells they can get.

But NWU English Professor William Kloefkorn told the council that he drinks beer with students and that some of them are the best writers he has.

And another NWU professor, Leon Satterfield, suggested it would be safer for NWU students to walk two blocks to on-campus homes than to drive across town "with a snootful."

The council finally decided to recommend that the State Liquor Control Commission deny the application, and another request for a new license at 4511 N. 56th, on the basis it has not taken action one way or another on the proposed changes in the city's liquor policies.

"We better do something pretty soon on this report," Council Chairman Max Denney observed.

The city's liquor policies have become increasingly controversial. A common claim is that it costs $30,000 to $35,000 to buy a liquor license in the city, although it is illegal to sell them.

Recently the State Liquor Control Commission has on three occasions overridden the city's quota of 135.

Council trims size of annexation

The City Council Monday cut the proposed annexation of 320 acres of land in north Lincoln to somewhere under 10 acres.

Landowners in the area had objected that the land is being used for rural purposes, but Planning Director Doug Brogden had recommended it be annexed because of urbanization.

The council decided, however, to annex only enough land to permit the extension of 33rd St. to Gladstone and the extension of Gladstone to 35th St.

That original request had triggered the recommendation from Brogden, who said the 320-acre tract extends like a finger into the city.

On another matter, the council delayed action on an ordinance dealing with a proposed contract with the Humane Society to keep stray animals picked up in the city.

The City-County Health Department is slated to begin catching stray dogs and cats on Jan. 1. The job formerly was done by the Humane Society, but the city decided to take over the job because of complaints.

Humane Society attorney Rick Aiken said the society objected to the proposed ordinance because it apparently gave the city authority over the director of the society.

On other route matters the council took the following actions:

- Approved the application of Gary D. Reineke, doing business as The Keg Tavern, for a Class C liquor license at 104 N. 20th.
- Approved application of Charles R. Studnicka and Thomas J. Studnicka for a transfer of Class C liquor license at 6212 Havelock and application of Charles R. Studnicka as manager.
- Approved application of J and L Liquor Inc. for a retail Class C liquor license at 525 S. 13th.
- Approved application of Steven Beyer as manager for Max Beyer Distributing Co.
- Approved application of H. David Kuehl as manager for Dumplings Restaurant.
- Approved application of Michael James McHale as manager of Chesterfield, Bottomsley and Potts.
- Delayed action on approving rules and regulations of the Housing Board.
- Approved the Lincoln Action Program weatherization project and University Place revitalization project for funding under 1976 community development block grant program.
- Approved authorizing planning director to administratively approve location of bus shelters within open space.
- Ordered construction of Water Districts 1014-1016, Sewer Districts 1029-1031.
- Vacated south 20 feet of High St. from west line of 10th to west line of Lot C.
- Vacated 42nd St. adjacent to lot 14 and south 75 feet of lot 15, Faulkner's Place.
- Approved change of zone 1501 from AA rural to A-2 at 5601 W. Superior.
- Delayed action two weeks on request for change of zone from Roger Anderson from A-1 to G at 6940 A.
- Created Water District 1017 in Fremont and Repaving District 127 in Fremont.
- Ordinances, First Reading
  - A corrective ordinance repealing Ordinance 11818 and correcting error in legal description of zoning districts.
  - Supplementing municipal code relating to pay schedule of emergency services coordinator.
  - Amending municipal code to provide for annual licenses and accountings for charitable solicitations in city.
  - Creating ornamental lighting district in Landon's Add.

Council continues debate about West Lincoln park

New dimensions entered the squabble over a West Lincoln park at the City Council meeting Monday.

Council Chairman Max Denney held up a pile of mail from school children in the area supporting the park.

But resident Dan Garcia appeared before the council to tell them that his children had written letters opposing the park, only to see the letters thrown in the trash.

"Who organized this?" Denney wanted to know of the letter-writing campaign. The question went unanswered.

William Smith, chairman of the West Lincoln Community Association, told the council that the only real opposition to the park was from the property owners who would have to sell their land.

And he said there were plenty of people in "old West Lincoln who still object to the city's annexation of the area years ago.

"They'll object to anything the city or City Council does," he argued.

Mayor Helen Boosalis told the council that a costly door-to-door survey in the area turned up majority support for the park.

The council voted several weeks ago to drop the proposed park between N.W. 1st, N.W. 4th, W. Belmont and W. Dawes.

Since then the council has agreed to reconsider the decision and it appeared that some of the six-member council majority which wanted to drop the park may be wavering.

But discussion became entangled in legal technicalities on what the earlier action meant and what was required to sort out the situation and the council decided to let the city's attorneys mull over the situation for another week.

In the meantime, the proposed park remains in limbo. "Just sit still," Denney advised Urban Development Director George Chick, who heads the city agency emeshed in the park controversy.

Replacement planned

Lincoln's mayor said Monday that she plans to replace one of the three members of the Lincoln Electric System Board whose terms expire this month.

But Mayor Helen Boosalis said she plans to temporarily reappoint four members of the Lincoln General Hospital Board until the hospital's status with the city is decided.

The LES Board members whose terms are expiring are Chairman Tom Allman, John Haessler and Barbara Lautzenheiser, who was appointed in May.

The hospital board members whose terms are expiring are Jerry Schiermeyer, David Calhoun, Herbert Hopkins and John Robinson.

Legal step authorized

The City Council Monday approved the use of condemnation proceedings to acquire land for expanding its wellfields near Ashland.

The council took that action after hearing from Public Works Director Bob Obering that two of the landowners involved in the proposed expansion are refusing to negotiate.

Obering said that about eight or nine landowners are involved in the city's attempt to acquire 1,000 acres to meet future water needs.

Donated livers flown to Denver

Washington (UPI) — Livers from donors in Los Angeles have been transplanted in two children in Denver, marking the first time in the United States that the fragile organs have been stored and shipped before being implanted, it was announced Monday.

The National Institutes of Health said the ability to transport livers over lengthy distances could help overcome the problem of donor shortages in the event such operations become a standard practice in the future.

The two livers were transplanted by surgeons at the University of Colorado Medical Center, which has performed 116 liver transplants, more than any other group in the world. The practice is still experimental, however, because the survival rate has not been good.

Of the 116 liver recipients at the university, 30 lived at least one year following the operation and 14 are still alive.

The first liver flown to Denver from Los Angeles was transplanted Sept. 1 in a 2½-year-old boy whose diseased liver could not support him. He has been released from the hospital and was reported "doing fine."

The second such transplant was Nov. 11 when a liver was removed from a donor at the University of California at Los Angeles Medical Center and transplanted in a 7-year-old girl suffering from what would have been fatal liver disease. She was in satisfactory condition Monday.

The two operations took seven to eight hours from the time the liver was removed from the donor until the successful transplant.

The livers were stored in a special cold storage chest that was carried to Denver by a doctor flying in the passenger section of a commercial airliner. Kidneys have been shipped this way but a liver has been considered much more fragile than a kidney.

"We just didn't think it would be possible to transport and preserve it for long periods of time," said Dr. Thomas E. Starzl, head of the Colorado transplant team.

The groom was detained

German authorities identified the suspect only as Jimmie Smith, a 21-year-old American soldier from South Carolina.

According to Bamberg police, the robbery occurred last Saturday two hours before the wedding. The holdup man fled with $267 when a travel agency employee pressed an alarm button, police said.

Police officer hurt in crash

Three sites hit hard by fires

Three separate fires in Lincoln Monday caused property damage rated considerably by firemen.

Monday evening a fire broke out in a long wooden building located at 2701 N. 27th near a trailer court. The cause of the fire was not certain, however it started in the south end of the building, and was stopped by firemen before it reached the north end. The building was being used as a vehicle repair shop.

A noon fire damaged the Raymond Rider residence at 1901 Prospect. The fire apparently was started by a faulty electric blanket in an upstairs bedroom located at the northwest corner of the house. Besides the fire damage to the room, the entire house sustained smoke damage.

Too many holes

Washington (AP) — The Securities and Exchange Commission said there are too many legal loopholes that might permit secret takeovers of publicly owned U.S. businesses.

Imperial wizard conked with sign outside courtroom

Camp Pendleton, Calif. (AP) — The imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan was hit on the head with a sign Monday during a demonstration outside a courtroom where a pretrial hearing was being held for three black Marines.

The blow was struck by a woman demonstrator with a sign about two feet by two feet after the Klan leader unfurled a KKK banner. He appeared stunned but was uninjured. No arrests were made.

The hearing for the black Marines dealt with charges resulting from a Nov. 13 raid by blacks wielding pipes and screwdrivers on a beer party thrown by seven white Marines. Six whites were injured.

It was later reported that the Klan aim had been to disrupt a Ku Klux Klan meeting, which was being held in an adjoining barracks.

Monday's clash was between a multi-racial group of about 18 persons from San Diego and Los Angeles and Wizard David Duke, 26, of Metairie, La., and about six followers.

The demonstrators — members of The Committee to End Racism, they said — chanted, "Free the black Marines," and "Jail the Klan."

Military police escorted both groups off the base after the fracas.

When Duke arrived at the base Sunday night, he called the recent transfer of several Klan members to other Marine bases "improper and unwarranted" — a revelation of how the service treats the white serviceman.

At the hearing, the counsel for Lance Cpl. Bobby R. Bishop, 23, of Bryan, Texas, asked a military judge to appoint an assistant counsel since the government had what he termed a battery of prosecutors.

Cost of living up by 319%

Buenos Aires, Argentina (AP) — The cost of living index in Argentina rose 8% in November and reached 319.3% so far this year, the military government reported.

The November inflation rate was lower than the 8.5% rate in October, but higher than a 6.5% rate predicted for November by government officials.

The second such transplant was Nov. 11 when a liver was removed from a donor at the University of California at Los Angeles Medical Center and transplanted in a 7-year-old girl suffering from what would have been fatal liver disease. She was in satisfactory condition Monday.

The two operations took seven to eight hours from the time the liver was removed from the donor until the successful transplant.

The livers were stored in a special cold storage chest that was carried to Denver by a doctor flying in the passenger section of a commercial airliner. Kidneys have been shipped this way but a liver has been considered much more fragile than a kidney.

"We just didn't think it would be possible to transport and preserve it for long periods of time," said Dr. Thomas E. Starzl, head of the Colorado transplant team.

The groom was detained

Bamberg, West Germany (AP) — While the prospective bride waited in a U.S. Army chapel here, the groom was arrested on suspicion of robbing a travel agency — presumably to help finance the wedding, Bamberg police reported.

German authorities identified the suspect only as Jimmie Smith, a 21-year-old American soldier from South Carolina.

According to Bamberg police, the robbery occurred last Saturday two hours before the wedding. The holdup man fled with $267 when a travel agency employee pressed an alarm button, police said.

Police officer hurt in crash

A single car accident early Monday evening left one Lincoln police officer with lacerations on the forehead and two broken ribs. Officer Don Malcom, 32, was making his final rounds for the night in Pioneer's Park when his car veered off the road and struck a tree. Malcom was apparently disentangling his keys prior to locking the park gate when the accident occurred. Damage to the 1975 Ram Charger was estimated at $2,000. Malcom was treated and released at a local hospital.

Imperial wizard conked with sign outside courtroom

Camp Pendleton, Calif. (AP) — The imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan was hit on the head with a sign Monday during a demonstration outside a courtroom where a pretrial hearing was being held for three black Marines.

The blow was struck by a woman demonstrator with a sign about two-feet-by-two-feet after the Klan leader unfurled a KKK banner. He appeared stunned but was uninjured. No arrests were made.

The hearing for the black Marines dealt with charges resulting from a Nov. 13 raid by blacks wielding pipes and screwdrivers on a beer party thrown by seven white Marines. Six whites were injured.

It was later reported that the blacks' aim had been to disrupt a Ku Klux Klan meeting, which was being held in an adjoining barracks.

Monday's clash was between a multracial group of about 18 persons from San Diego and Los Angeles and Wizard David Duke, 26, of Metairie, La., and about six followers.

The demonstrators — members of The Committee to End Racism, they said — chanted, "Free the black Marines," and "Jail the Klan."

Military police escorted both groups off the base after the fracas.

When Duke arrived at the base Sunday night, he called the recent transfer of several Klan members to other Marine bases "improper and unwarranted — a revelation of how the service treats the white serviceman."

At the hearing, the counsel for Lance Cpl. Bobby R. Bishop, 23, of Bryan, Texas, asked a military judge to appoint an assistant counsel since the government had what he termed a battery of prosecutors.

The hearing recessed without a ruling.

Three sites hit hard by fires

Three separate fires in Lincoln Monday caused property damage rated considerably by firemen.

Monday evening a fire broke out in a long wooden building located at 2701 N. 27th near a trailer court. The cause of the fire was not certain, however it started in the south end of the building, and was stopped by firemen before it reached the north end. The building was being used as a vehicle repair shop.

A noon fire damaged the Raymond-Rider residence at 1901 Prospect. The fire apparently was started by a faulty electric blanket in an upstairs bedroom located at the northwest corner of the house. Besides the fire damage to the room, the entire house sustained smoke damage.

A third fire caused considerable damage in the early morning hours to a house under construction at 5827 LaSalle. The fire apparently broke out when a heater which had been left on caused some canvas to ignite in the building.

Too many holes

Washington (AP) — The Securities and Exchange Commission said there are too many legal loopholes that might permit secret takeovers of publicly owned U.S. businesses.

Cost of living up by 319%

Buenos Aires, Argentina (AP) — The cost of living index in Argentina rose 8% in November and reached 319.3% so far this year, the military government reported.

The November inflation rate was lower than the 8.5% rate in October, but higher than a 6.5% rate predicted for November by government officials.

Japan influence on teacher's life

By Gerry Switzer
Star Staff Writer

The lives of many have been influenced by the Japanese and their skills but few have felt that influence in so many ways as Olive Fletcher Scott.

And how much her life would be touched by the Japanese was little realized by the native Nebraskan and graduate of the University of Nebraska who was teaching music in Honolulu in 1941.

"We figured the attack was coming," she recalls. Still, her first reaction when the announcement came over the radio on that early December Sunday morning was one of disbelief, she added.

Preparing to go to a Sunday picnic, Mrs. Scott said she heard on the radio that some unidentified planes were bombing Pearl Harbor. "I at first thought perhaps it was just an air show," she recalls, but then she heard the "real terror in the announcer's voice."

The whole sky was a "mass of smoke and flame," she said, recalling what she saw from the rooftop of the apartment building where she lived.

Later she learned that behind that mass of smoke and flame some of her closest friends had been shot down.

She said that she and several military officers from the USS Arizona were among guests invited to Thanksgiving dinner two weeks earlier at the home of friends in Honolulu and "practically all of them were killed."

That bleak Sunday was the beginning of blackouts at night, communication cutoffs and the end of all business and school in Honolulu, she recalls.

And it was also a long, anxious wait for a return to the states.

Mrs. Scott, not yet married at that time, said her first concern after the attack was getting word she was safe to her parents in Orchard, Nebraska.

And although the senior Fletchers had been assured by Nebraska Congressman Karl Stefan of Norfolk that he had checked and found out their daughter was safe, the cablegram with the simple message, "Safe," which arrived a few days later was probably one of the most welcome communications they ever received.

For several days after the attack, people living in Honolulu went nowhere and there was no phone service. But when they did venture out, Mrs. Scott recalls there were "great runs on grocery stores with people buying anything in cans they could get their hands on."

But the most valuable thing on the island, she said, became dark paper to put over the windows.

A few days later when the phone service was restored, Mrs. Scott recalls her first call came from a Japanese family who were the "biggest florists" in Honolulu at that time.

She said she taught the family's children piano lessons and the mother called to see if Mrs. Fletcher Scott was safe.

Food was scarce during the next three months Mrs. Scott was in Honolulu but "I didn't go hungry," she said, noting everyone got along the best way they could.

She did volunteer work and worked at the draft headquarters where her knowledge of some Chinese, Korean and Hawaiian language aided in interviewing draftees.

But she kept hoping there would be some way to get back to the states.

She said she was told one March evening that if she were at a certain dock at the appointed time the next morning she could probably get a ride home on a British ship which had stopped in Honolulu for supplies.

"I gave away everything I owned including my clothes and typewriter," she said, and sailed home on the Aquatania — the "last ship from Singapore before it fell," she said.

Mrs. Scott finished out the school year teaching English at Plattsmouth where the school's English teacher had been lost to the draft.

Later moving to California to teach, Mrs. Scott met her husband, Spencer Scott, who just recently retired from the military where he was an education chief in the Air Force.

Assignments throughout the world took the Scotts to Japan where they bought a home and made some of their closest and dearest friends, according to Mrs. Scott.

Mrs. Scott collects art.

Noting that the Japanese all want to become Americanized, she said English is compulsory in all Japanese schools today, and one of her most rewarding experiences was developing in 1970 a complete English course for the Missawa High School in Japan.

She said she had learned to speak Japanese quite well over the years and her Midwestern twang appealed to the school there.

Mrs. Scott refused to accept pay for her work with the English curriculum, but she has hanging in her home, which displays many beautiful Oriental items, a painting of Mt. Fuji which was a gift from the school in appreciation for her work.

And when the Scotts moved from Omaha to Lincoln last April, it was again Mrs. Scott's background in Japanese communication which aided them in finding a home to purchase. The Scotts' home was previously the home of the Sadaichi Sato family who moved to Lincoln with the Kawasaki plant.

Yes, the Japanese have had a great influence on the life of Olive Fletcher Scott — and her work is still influencing the lives of the Japanese.

Handicapped conference discordant

The director of the Nebraska White House Conference on Handicapped Individuals began reassessing workshop assignments Monday after a protest on the issue by distraught delegate members.

The protest involved about 40 of the 130 delegates who were upset with where they were assigned to work during the three-day conference, according to Larry Nedrow, conference chief.

Meeting at the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education, the conference came to a near standstill as the protest came to light in a position paper read by Barbara Beach, chairperson of the Nebraska chapter of the National Federation of the Blind.

The paper resulted from a Sunday-night caucus of the unhappy members.

She said the problem stemmed from the lack of input from actual handicapped persons in the planning of the state conference.

In planning the conference, Nedrow and his staff sent a list covering eight workshops dealing with 50 federally-mandated issues. The list asked the delegates' preferences to aid in the assignments.

Most of the delegates got their choice, but members of the dissident group did not.

"The conference has been set up by providers of services with little input by consumers," Ms. Beach said in a later interview. She gave herself as an example saying her blindness didn't especially qualify her to speak for persons in wheelchairs.

Nedrow, responding to the conflict, said he'd check into the assignments and make adjustments for Tuesday's sessions, which started another debate.

The protesting group wanted the changes immediately.

Nedrow said the schedule would be too difficult to change on such short notice.

The conference meeting here is the result of six Nebraska regional conferences sponsored and funded by the federal government. Information from the state conference will be issued to the seven delegates to the national meeting scheduled for May in Washington.

Farm wife fashionable pipe hauler

Trumbull (AP) — Charlene Nowka is a fashionably dressed woman who married into the farm life — and can wheel a tractor or haul irrigation pipe like any strapping farmhand.

"I could recognize corn and wheat and that was the extent of my knowledge," she said, referring to her transformation from a Hastings city girl to the wife of farmer Milton Nowka. "But I learned fast. When you're young, you can overcome all the obstacles and inconveniences."

Mrs. Nowka is a veteran seamstress and tailor who likes to carry over her enthusiasm for smart dress into the fields.

Although she doesn't sew her work clothes — she says she doesn't want to see her creations ruined — she buys tank tops and shorts for summer and slacks and jackets for cooler weather.

Early summer months are the busiest on the Nowka spreads near Trumbull, Hastings and Doniphan, she said. That's when Mrs. Nowka is busy dawn to dark hauling and setting up irrigation pipe.

"It's a big job," she said.

She also picks corn, cuts stalk, hauls fertilizer, mends fences and gates and moves cattle.

"One thing I will not do is milk," she said. "I never started it because it's too easy for a man to let his wife have the job." She also confesses to a fear of cattle in her early introduction to farming.

"I call myself a full-time hired man," Mrs. Nowka said. "I feel liberated because I've had equal rights since the day I was married."

In the winter, the Nowkas head to Colorado ski slopes to enjoy a sport they tried four years ago on a co-op trip.

State has 'no basis' for civil legal action

By Dick Holman
Star Staff Writer

The state has "no basis" to pursue either criminal or civil legal action in the National Guard mock hanging incident, Nebraska Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas reiterated Monday.

However, Douglas said courts-martial or military administrative penalties offer possible avenues, as well as a civil suit by the mock hanging victim.

Douglas reaffirmed his counsel to the governor in a letter to Omaha State Sen. Ernest Chambers.

Chambers had written Douglas challenging this statement in Gov. J. James Exon's report on the May 31 incident at Ft. Gordon, Ga.:

"The attorney general has advised that since the incident took place in Georgia, that Nebraska laws were not violated, and no civil action or other legal action in Nebraska is appropriate."

Excluding courts-martial, Douglas said, he advised Exon it would be inappropriate for the state to attempt criminal legal proceedings. And he said the civil route "is not available to the state in this matter."

"We all were aware of the possible procedures under . . . the (Nebraska) military code," Douglas wrote.

Chambers had said the attorney general "woefully misinformed" Exon regarding his options available in the case, and the senator's contention that "high ranking Nebraska officials desire to avoid the responsibility of taking decisive action to rectify the situation."

The attorney general told Chambers "I have no intention of shirking my responsibility to (Nebraska) citizens."

Exon, after an investigation, concluded it was "no more, no less" than a mock hanging and said there was no evidence supporting Chambers' charges of attempted murder and a coverup. Nebraska Guardsmen were present but, Exon found, not directly involved when Mississippians put a noose around black Pvt. Dan Briscoe's neck and threw the rope over a tree.

Chambers charged and Exon found supporting evidence that Nebraska Guard officers had falsified documents about Briscoe that were sent to Washington.

Meanwhile, Chambers sent Exon another letter Monday charging the "unfitness of Burl Johnson" to be promoted from deputy adjutant general when Maj. Gen. Francis Winner steps down on Jan. 1.

Chambers cited legislative testimony in which Winner said Johnson "is still a lieutenant colonel because he wasn't qualified to get promoted to a full colonel at a time when he should have been." Winner said the previous adjutant general gave Johnson "a waiver, meaning he did not need to get promoted to stay in the Guard" effective to age 60, according to Chambers.

Chambers challenged Exon's comments that Johnson took the incident seriously from the beginning. Chambers said "I shall do all in my power to see that he gets what is due him for his complicity in the obvious coverup of this atrocious incident."

Soil expert says impact statement inadequate, distorted

By Jim Camden
Star Staff Writer

A soil expert testified Monday that the environmental impact statement for the proposed Norden dam project was inadequate and distorted.

Dean Lansing, a soil and water analyst from Wheatridge, Colo., said some of the data in the impact statement was so old it was of no practical use, and information quoted from other sources was taken out of context.

The statement "watered down" the potential danger of nitrate poisoning to the area's water if the 77,000-acre irrigation project is completed, Lansing said. Nitrate levels in the area trebled between 1961 and 1971, according to a study offered as evidence.

The increase is due mainly to higher use of fertilizer which contaminates groundwater.

Jeffrey A. Bogue, federal defense attorney, pointed out however that the impact statement could not have contained that information on nitrate level increases. The study on nitrate was published in 1973, a year after the impact statement was released.

Lansing said some information on soil and water conditions was included in the statement, but most of it was "coincidental" to other matters. Among necessary facts labeled as missing from the document are a study on the organic material content of the soil and data to predict the possibilities of erosion.

The most recent information on water quality contained in the statement was gathered in 1947-53, Lansing pointed out. He said the total land in Holt County under irrigation in 1953 was 4,000 acres; in 1974 it was 149,000 acres.

J. Bruce Teichman, attorney for the Save the Niobrara River Association which is suing to stop the project, held up a stack of reports and studies more than a foot high. He asked Lansing if there was enough information in all of the documents to make an environmental impact state on the project.

"No," answered Lansing.

The Bureau of Reclamation merely repeated general statements of common knowledge without providing any supporting facts, Lansing said. In other deficient areas, the bureau said the information wasn't available.

"Nobody else gets away with this type of answer," Lansing said. "If it's not available, you go out and get it."

The trial over the suit to stop the $160-million plus project goes into its fifth day Tuesday. Bruce Johnson, an agriculture specialist from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, is scheduled to testify.

Korean gifts provoke Thone

Congressman Charles Thone Monday said he will propose legislation to outlaw so-called "office accounts" for members of Congress.

"These accounts are used to pay for some of the expenses that members have between campaigns," the First District Republican noted.

There is no requirement that members of the Congress reveal the source or amount of those funds and it is through them, Thone said, that South Korean agents have poured gifts and contributions to many federal officials.

"The very idea of a member of Congress soliciting funds and then not reporting the donors or the purposes of the gifts is scandalous," he said.

Thone said he has never had such an account in his office.

The Korean affair which has been unfolding for the past few months will be "America's greatest political scandal," Thone said, and one which could be prevented in the future through enactment of his proposal.

Paramedic legislation hearings scheduled

The state Health Department Monday said a series of hearings starts Tuesday in Omaha on proposed legislation to permit paramedics to perform certain life-saving techniques under the supervision of physicians.

The hearings will be conducted by the department's emergency health medical services division and the Nebraska Legislature's Public Health and Welfare Committee, with the first hearing Tuesday afternoon.

Other hearings will be Wednesday in Kearney at 3 p.m. and Thursday in Scottsbluff at 1:30 p.m.

The life-saving techniques proposed in the legislation would include administration of intravenous solutions, transmitting electrocardiogram information, cardiac defibrillation in cases of cardiac arrest following a heart attack and other procedures stipulated by a board of advance prehospital care.

Computer history tool

Computers are becoming a useful tool for historians, according to Dr. Ron Nangle, assistant professor of history at Nebraska Wesleyan University.

Quantitative history, a research approach, uses computers along with census information, official records and voter registrations to reconstruct lifestyles in communities by generalizing what the average person was doing at a certain time, Nangle explained.

Nangle teaches two courses in quantitative history at NWU, one of about 50 undergraduate programs in the nation to use the methods.

Nangle and NWU political science Prof. Jan Vermeer are presently using the technique to study whether incumbency in a non-partisan legislature such as Nebraska's has the same effect on re-election as in a partisan body.

Hubbell man dies in accident

Terry L. Stradley, 36, of Hubbell was killed Nov. 7 in a one-car accident east of Hubbell, the State Roads Department's accident records bureau said Monday.

The bureau said Stradley was a passenger in a car driven by Timothy P. Mumm of Lincoln, whose car crashed about two miles east of Hubbell on Neb. 8. The bureau said the accidental death had not been reported earlier.

Japan influence on teacher's life

By Gerry Switzer
Star Staff Writer

The lives of many have been influenced by the Japanese and their skills but few have felt that influence in so many ways as Olive Fletcher Scott.

And how much her life would be touched by the Japanese was little realized by the native Nebraskan and graduate of the University of Nebraska who was teaching music in Honolulu in 1941.

"We figured the attack was coming," she recalls. Still, her first reaction when the announcement came over the radio on that early December Sunday morning was one of disbelief, she added.

Preparing to go to a Sunday picnic, Mrs. Scott said she heard on the radio that some unidentified planes were bombing Pearl Harbor.

"I at first thought perhaps it was just an air show," she recalls, but then she heard the "real terror in the announcer's voice."

The whole sky was a "mass of smoke and flame," she said, recalling that she saw from the rooftop of the apartment building where she lived.

Later she learned that behind that mass of smoke and flame some of her closest friends had been shot down.

She said that she and several military officers from the USS Arizona were among guests invited to Thanksgiving dinner two weeks earlier at the home of friends in Honolulu and "practically all of them were killed."

That bleak Sunday was the beginning of blackouts at night, communication cutoffs and the end of all business and school in Honolulu, she recalls.

And it was also a long, anxious wait for a return to the states.

Mrs. Scott, not yet married at that time, said her first concern after the attack was getting word she was safe to her parents in Orchard, Nebraska.

And although the senior Fletchers had been assured by Nebraska Congressman Karl Stefan of Norfolk that he had checked and found out their daughter was safe, the cablegram with the simple message, "Safe," which arrived a few days later was probably one of the most welcome communications they ever received.

For several days after the attack, people living in Honolulu went nowhere and there was no phone service. But when they did venture out, Mrs. Scott recalls there were "great runs on grocery stores with people buying anything in cans they could get their hands on."

But the most valuable thing on the island, she said, became dark paper to put over the windows.

A few days later when the phone service was restored, Mrs. Scott recalls her first call came from a Japanese family who were the "biggest florists" in Honolulu at that time.

She said she taught the family's children piano lessons and the mother called to see if Mrs. Fletcher was safe.

Food was scarce during the next three months Mrs. Scott was in Honolulu but "I didn't go hungry," she said, noting everyone got along the best way they could.

She did volunteer work and worked at the draft headquarters where her knowledge of some Chinese, Korean and Hawaiian language aided in interviewing draftees.

But she kept hoping there would be some way to get back to the states.

She said she was told one March evening that if she were at a certain dock at the appointed time the next morning she could probably get a ride home on a British ship which had stopped in Honolulu for supplies.

"I gave away everything I owned including my clothes and typewriter," and sailed home on the Aquatania — the "last ship from Singapore before it fell," she said.

Mrs. Scott finished out the school year teaching English at Plattsmouth where the school's English teacher had been lost to the draft.

Later moving to California to teach, Mrs. Scott met her husband, Spencer Scott, who just recently retired from the military where he was an education chief in the Air Force.

Assignments throughout the world took the Scotts to Japan where they bought a home and made some of their closest and dearest friends, according to Mrs. Scott.

Mrs. Scott collects art.

Noting that the Japanese all want to become Americanized, she said English is compulsory in all Japanese schools today, and one of her most rewarding experiences was developing in 1970 a complete English course for the Missawa High School in Japan.

She said she had learned to speak Japanese quite well over the years and her Midwestern twang appealed to the school there.

Mrs. Scott refused to accept pay for her work with the English curriculum, but she has hanging in her home, which displays many beautiful Oriental items, a painting of Mt. Fuji which was a gift from the school in appreciation for her work.

And when the Scotts moved from Omaha to Lincoln last April, it was again Mrs. Scott's background in Japanese communication which aided them in finding a home to purchase. The Scotts' home was previously the home of the Sadaichi Saito family who moved to Lincoln with the Kawasakis plant.

Yes, the Japanese have had a great influence on the life of Olive Fletcher Scott — and her work is still influencing the lives of the Japanese.

Handicapped conference discordant

The director of the Nebraska White House Conference on Handicapped Individuals began reassessing workshop assignments Monday after a protest on the issue by distraught delegate members.

The protest involved about 40 of the 150 delegates who were upset with where they were assigned to work during the three-day conference, according to Larry Nedrow, conference chief.

Meeting at the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education, the conference came to a near standstill as the protest came to light in a position paper read by Barbara Beach, chairperson of the Nebraska chapter of the National Federation of the Blind.

The paper resulted from a Sunday-night caucus of the unhappy members.

She said the problem stemmed from the lack of input from actual handicapped persons in the planning of the state conference.

In planning the conference, Nedrow and his staff sent a list covering eight workshops dealing with 50 federally-mandated issues. The list asked the delegates' preferences to aid in the assignments.

Most of the delegates got their choice, but members of the dissident group did not.

"The conference has been set up by providers of services with little input by consumers," Ms. Beach said in a later interview.

She gave herself as an example saying her blindness didn't especially qualify her to speak for persons in wheelchairs.

Nedrow, responding to the conflict, said he'd check into the assignments and make adjustments for Tuesday's sessions, which started another debate.

The protesting group wanted the changes immediately.

Nedrow said the schedule would be too difficult to change on such short notice.

The conference meeting here is the result of six Nebraska regional conferences sponsored and funded by the federal government. Information from the state conference will be issued to the seven delegates to the national meeting scheduled for May in Washington.

Farm wife fashionable pipe hauler

Trumbull (AP) — Charlene Nowka is a fashionably dressed woman who married into the farm life — and can wheel a tractor or haul irrigation pipe like any strapping farmhand.

"I could recognize corn and wheat and that was the extent of my knowledge," she said, referring to her transformation from a Hastings city girl to the wife of farmer Milton Nowka. "But I learned fast. When you're young, you can overcome all the obstacles and inconveniences."

Mrs. Nowka is a veteran seamstress and tailor who likes to carry over her enthusiasm for smart dress into the fields.

Although she doesn't sew her work clothes — she says she doesn't want to see her creations ruined — she buys tank tops and shorts for summer and slacks and jackets for cooler weather.

Early summer months are the busiest on the Nowka spreads near Trumbull, Hastings and Doniphan, she said. That's when Mrs. Nowka is busy down to dark hauling and setting up irrigation pipe.

"It's a big job," she said.

She also picks corn, cuts stalk, hauls fertilizer, mends fences and gates and moves cattle.

"One thing I will not do is milk," she said. "I never started it because it's too easy for a man to let his wife have the job." She also confesses to a fear of cattle in her early introduction to farming.

"I call myself a full-time hired man," Mrs. Nowka said. "I feel liberated because I've had equal rights since the day I was married."

In the winter, the Nowkas head to Colorado ski slopes to enjoy a sport they tried four years ago on a co-op trip.

State has 'no basis' for civil legal action

By Dick Holman
Star Staff Writer

The state has "no basis" to pursue either criminal or civil legal action in the National Guard mock hanging incident, Nebraska Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas reiterated Monday.

However, Douglas said courts-martial or military administrative penalties offer possible avenues, as well as a civil suit by the mock hanging victim.

Douglas reaffirmed his counsel to the governor in a letter to Omaha State Sen. Ernest Chambers.

Chambers had written Douglas challenging this statement in Gov. J. James Exon's report on the May 31 incident at Ft. Gordon, Ga.:

"The attorney general has advised that since the incident took place in Georgia, that Nebraska laws were not violated, and no civil action or other legal action in Nebraska is appropriate."

Excluding courts-martial, Douglas said, he advised Exon it would be inappropriate for the state to attempt criminal legal proceedings. And he said the civil route "is not available to the state in this matter."

"We all were aware of the possible procedures under . . . the (Nebraska) military code," Douglas wrote.

Chambers had said the attorney general "woefully misinformed" Exon regarding his options available in the case, and the senator's contention that "high ranking Nebraska officials desire to avoid the responsibility of taking decisive action to rectify the situation."

The attorney general told Chambers "I have no intention of shirking my responsibility to (Nebraska) citizens."

Exon, after an investigation, concluded it was "no more, no less" than a mock hanging and said there was no evidence supporting Chambers' charges of attempted murder and a coverup. Nebraska Guardsmen were present but, Exon found, not directly involved when Mississippians put a noose around black Pvt Dan Briscoe's neck and threw the rope over a tree.

Chambers charged and Exon found supporting evidence that Nebraska Guard officers had falsified documents about Briscoe that were sent to Washington.

Meanwhile, Chambers sent Exon another letter Monday charging the "unfitness of Burl Johnson" to be promoted from deputy adjutant general when Maj. Gen. Francis Winner steps down on Jan. 1.

Chambers cited legislative testimony in which Winner said Johnson "is still a lieutenant colonel because he wasn't qualified to get promoted to a full colonel at a time when he should have been." Winner said the previous adjutant general gave Johnson "a waiver, meaning he did not need to get promoted to stay in the Guard" effective to age 60, according to Chambers.

Chambers challenged Exon's comments that Johnson took the incident seriously from the beginning. Chambers said "I shall do all in my power to see that he gets what is due him for his complicity in the obvious coverup of this atrocious incident."

Soil expert says impact statement inadequate, distorted

By Jim Camden
Star Staff Writer

A soil expert testified Monday that the environmental impact statement for the proposed Norden dam project was inadequate and distorted.

Dean Lansing, a soil and water analyst from Wheatridge, Colo., said some of the data in the impact statement was so old it was of no practical use, and information quoted from other sources was taken out of context.

The statement "watered down" the potential danger of nitrate poisoning to the area's water if the 77,000-acre irrigation project is completed, Lansing said. Nitrate levels in the area trebled between 1961 and 1971, according to a study offered as evidence.

The increase is due mainly to higher use of fertilizer which contaminates groundwater.

Jeffrey A. Bogue, federal defense attorney, pointed out however that the impact statement could not have contained that information on nitrate level increases. The study on nitrate was published in 1973, a year after the impact statement was released.

Lansing said some information on soil and water conditions was included in the statement, but most of it was "coincidental" to other matters. Among necessary facts labeled as missing from the document are a study on the organic material content of the soil and data to predict the possibilities of erosion.

The most recent information on water quality contained in the statement was gathered in 1947-53, Lansing pointed out. He said the total land in Holt County under irrigation in 1953 was 4,000 acres; in 1974 it was 149,000 acres.

J. Bruce Teichman, attorney for the Save the Niobrara River Association which is suing to stop the project, held up a stack of reports and studies more than a foot high. He asked Lansing if there was enough information in all of the documents to make an environmental impact state on the project.

"No," answered Lansing.

The Bureau of Reclamation merely repeated general statements of common knowledge without providing any supporting facts, Lansing said. In other deficient areas, the bureau said the information wasn't available.

"Nobody else gets away with this type of answer," Lansing said. "If it's not available, you go out and get it."

The trial over the suit to stop the $160-million plus project goes into its fifth day Tuesday. Bruce Johnson, an agriculture specialist from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, is scheduled to testify.

Korean gifts provoke Thone

Congressman Charles Thone Monday said he will propose legislation to outlaw so-called "office accounts" for members of Congress.

"These accounts are used to pay for some of the expenses that members have between campaigns," the First District Republican noted.

There is no requirement that members of the Congress reveal the source or amount of those funds and it is through them, Thone said, that South Korean agents have poured gifts and contributions to many federal officials.

"The very idea of a member of Congress soliciting funds and then not reporting the donors or the purposes of the gifts is scandalous," he said.

Thone said he has never had such an account in his office.

The Korean affair which has been unfolding for the past few months will be "America's greatest political scandal," Thone said, and one which could be prevented in the future through enactment of his proposal.

Vandalism blamed for blackout

Kearney (AP) — Authorities blamed vandalism for a 30-minute power outage Monday in the east half of Kearney, including the entire industrial district.

The Buffalo County sheriff's office blamed a rifle bullet fired into a new transformer that had been installed at a substation northeast of Kearney.

The Nebraska Public Power District said the bullet caused an oil leak, which resulted in the transformer failure.

Ted Legatt, NPPD Kearney District manager, said it required about 30 minutes to route power through another transformer and restore service.

Paramedic legislation hearings scheduled

The state Health Department Monday said a series of hearings starts Tuesday in Omaha on proposed legislation to permit paramedics to perform certain life-saving techniques under the supervision of physicians.

The hearings will be conducted by the department's emergency health medical services division and the Nebraska Legislature's Public Health and Welfare Committee, with the first hearing Tuesday afternoon.

Other hearings will be Wednesday in Kearney at 3 p.m. and Thursday in Scottsbluff at 1:30 p.m.

The life-saving techniques proposed in the legislation would include administration of intravenous solutions, transmitting electrocardiogram information, cardiac defibrillation in cases of cardiac arrest following a heart attack and other procedures stipulated by a board of advance prehospital care.

Computer history tool

Computers are becoming a useful net tool for historians, according to Dr. Ron Naugle, assistant professor of history at Nebraska Wesleyan University.

Quantitative history, a research approach, uses computers along with census information, official records and voter registrations to reconstruct lifestyles in communities by generalizing what the average person was doing at a certain time, Naugle explained.

Naugle teaches two courses in quantitative history at NWU, one of about 50 undergraduate programs in the nation to use the methods.

Naugle and NWU political science Prof. Jan Vermeer are presently using the technique to study whether incumbency in a non-partisan legislature such as Nebraska's has the same effect on re-election as in a partisan body.

Hubbell man dies in accident

Terry L. Stradley, 26, of Hubbell was killed Nov. 7 in a one-car accident east of Hubbell, the State Roads Department's accident records bureau said Monday.

The bureau said Stradley was a passenger in a car driven by Timothy P. Mumm of Lincoln, whose car crashed about two miles east of Hubbell on Neb. 8. The bureau said the accidental death had not been reported earlier.

Here is a present for you that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to point out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 4. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Tuesday, December 7, 1976

Taurus packs a wallop and this applies to men and women. Individuals born under this sign can utilize strength, endurance to overcome odds. In 1977, many Taurus will organize priorities, have more responsibility and will earn more money. If married, the Taurus native could invest in business, especially around September. If single, marital status could change. An addition to family is indicated for many married Taurus.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Emphasis on short trips, versatility, messages, the testing of ideas. Cycle is such that waiting is beneficial. Means don't rush to decide. Refine techniques. Perceive what can be, what you can do to transform potential into actuality. Pisces, Virgo figure prominently.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Accent on finances, locating lost objects, getting the most for your money. You have more strength now than might be supposed. Know it and be confident. If single, realize that a relationship is serious. If you are playing games, get on the sidelines.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): What had been an obstacle to progress is removed. Cycle is high; take initiative. Make new starts, get rid of burden not rightly your own. Aries, Libra figure prominently. Personality is emphasized. You could win popularity contests.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Light is thrown on subject which had been cloaked in mystery. You obtain answers by getting to heart of matters. Romantic interlude is in picture. A decision is being made behind closed doors - it affects you. Outcome will be favorable. You'll get chance for greater independence.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Accent on winning friends, influencing people, having wishes come true. Rise above tendency to be envious of success of others. Your own sense of security will be enhanced. You'll be offered added compensation for special assignment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Accent on communicating with "boss." Job gets done and you deserve credit. Good news due - your standing is elevated. Social activity accelerated - popularity increases and there is travel opportunity. Gemini, Sagittarius figure prominently.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Long-range concepts, plans are spotlighted. You're able to get solid hold on what you actually need. Aquarius, Scorpio, Taurus persons could be involved. Emphasis on reading, writing, publishing, undertaking project which adds to your overall understanding. Knowledge.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Involvement, special relationship, significant changes, delving deep into what has been a mystery - these are emphasized. Leases, taxes, finances affecting partner or mate surge to forefront. You feel more, comprehend, perceive beyond level of the superficial. It is for real!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be diplomatic, make concessions, improve family situation by purchase of gift, remembrance of special occasion. Taurus, Libra could figure prominently. Resist on cooperative efforts, public relations, legal affairs, renewed understanding of partnership, marriage.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Go slow - moderation is key to progress. See situations, people as they are, not merely as you wish they could be. Emphasis on health, employment, special services, getting together with persons who share your interests. Avoid self-deception. Pisces, Virgo figure prominently.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Good Moon aspect coincides now with creativity, change, intensified relationships, the imprinting of style. Young person could make financial demands. Key is to be even-handed, to be aware of potential. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure prominently.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You find that what you own is worth more than originally estimated. Get contract, agreement reviewed. Be confident. Your sense of judgment is vindicated. Means you know what is to be without formal explanation of why this should be. It probably is your extrasensory perception!
